Central is tradition . . .

This building was not only the foundation of a school, but was also the foundation of the principles and ideals honored and cherished by all Centralites.

Traditions may seem baffling to the Freshman, but as a member of the student body, he soon becomes acquainted with them . . . a blending of old and new.
Central is new horizons . . .

Chemistry provides new experiences with instruments of the modern world.

Success in a competitive world demands utilization of every available moment.
Secondary education is the beginning of a journey toward the realities of adult life.

... with uncertainties of future life
Central is life . . .

Life at Central is not mere routine, for there is always an interesting project to work on or coming events to plan.

For four years of work the student is given a small piece of paper, but the worth of this paper will open the future.
Student organizations teach the fundamentals of a highly organized society.

... four years of co-operative effort

Participation in school activities gives the student a good idea of the differences in people and in the ways they react.
Central is you . . .

You may make the winning touchdown or be a spectator cheering the team on to victory.

In anticipation of the football game, you may try wrapping goal posts. This too, like the game, takes team work.
Life is not always easy. Anyone may have such perplexing problems as ice cream bars that refuse to stay frozen.

... an integral part of your school

Before a big event, you may experience nervous feelings on seeing your name in print, an ailment known as "butterflies."

Life at Central can be a rewarding one if the individual will open his mind to the opportunities offered students.
Through the years that Central has been in existence, there have been many changes made in the curriculum. These subject changes have occurred because of the advanced world we live in. In 1866 a Central student might have taken Greek, Mental Science, astronomy, and rhetoric. Today a student can take Spanish, English literature, chemistry, or economics.

In modern times, it becomes necessary either to keep in step with progress or be left behind. If a person chooses to be left behind, many doors are closed to him. Jobs that might have been desired are out of reach because of a lack of knowledge. But if progress is used as a mold for advanced education, success is then limited only to the efforts extended in attaining your goal.
Centralites explore grammar, literature

Central's English department, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Myers, encourages students to explore all phases of writing and literature so that they may learn to express their feelings and ideas accurately. As each student advances, he is led to discover his own abilities and develop them to their fullest capacity.

As freshmen and sophomores, Centralites learn the fundamentals of grammar and begin to explore literature. Juniors, in addition to reviewing grammar, may learn to express themselves through public speaking or acting by studying speech or drama. Seniors are offered a choice of English 12, drama, speech, or English literature. In English literature, students study the works of Shakespeare and other great writers, in order to acquire a greater appreciation and understanding of literature.

To build interest, students are offered the opportunity to participate in national, as well as local, competition in writing and speaking. Many Centralites have received recognition through these contests.

In these ways, Central's English department strives to provide its students with the background in English necessary for effective speech and creative writing.

As the class is led in a review of grammar, Jackie Clark, Junior, tries to get answers to all the questions she has.

Freshmen Dave Pearl and Vicki Barnes check out books they are encouraged to read as a part of their English program.

Jim Russell uses a chart to help him explain to his fellow classmates how to play a challenging game of chess.
Through effective make-up application, drama student Patsy DeShon is skillfully transformed into a wrinkled, old woman.

Latin, French, Spanish, German broaden world understanding

In an age when the world’s people are only hours apart, it is helpful for a successful person to be able to speak at least one foreign language. Central, realizing this need, now offers courses in four foreign languages.

For the student who wishes to become fluent in French, three years of study are offered. Emphasis is placed on gaining an ability to converse in French.

Two years of Spanish are taught for the student who wishes to learn the language used by most of our Latin American neighbors. Spanish students also learn about the culture of the Spanish people.

Two years of German, a relatively new language at Central, is now available to students.

Besides these three modern languages, Central also has an especially large Latin program as is shown in its five first year classes. In addition to learning the language, Latin students also explore Roman history and mythology.

Third page editors Priscilla Evans, Mark Meierhoffer, Peggy Bumphrey, Photographer Rick Rothstein, and Co-manager of Advertising Sharon Heath prepare copy to go in the next edition of the newspaper.
Newspaper receives first-class rating

Interviews, news-gathering, printer, paste-ups, proofreading, and deadlines—all must be faced by the members of Central’s first and second semester Outlook staff. The editors and page editors of the school newspaper meet frantic deadlines every other week in order to present Centralites the news and events of school life.

The highlight of this year’s Outlook staff was the day it received a special greeting card at Christmas time from Central’s favorite puppy, Snoopy, a Carl Schultz creation.

Bill Gardner, Karen Stubber, Sue Lott, and Howard Hines, go through the files to check on the number of inches of ads.

Page editors Sally Ness, Valerie Watkins, and Marsha Rowe talk over the headline sizes to use on the next news copy.

Co-editors Pam Hallberg and Catherine Hayward have the job of proofreading copy and writing editorials for the paper.

Tim Walley, Barbara Boyts, Sharon DenOuden, Susan Jackson, and Lana Guyer look at and discuss the various objects, awards, and news items on the staff’s bulletin board.
Sarah Neff, the WAKITAN editor, checks page assignments to see that enough pages will be ready for the next deadline.

Darla Yost and Sarah Neff, now in their second year on the staff, assist Mr. Bray in taking pictures for the WAKITAN.

During their lunch hour, Pam Hallberg and Barbara Boyts take payments for WAKITANS from Jim Beck and Sue Lott.

Wakitan staff works

As soon as the current WAKITAN is sent to press in the spring, the new staff sets to work on the next year’s book. They go over fundamentals, decide on the contents of the book, and work on tentative layouts.

During the summer, Missouri University offers the Journalism Workshop. As many of the staff members as possible attend to get new ideas for layouts and pictures.

Karla Sybert writes the numbers of the pages that each student’s pictures are found on as she works on indexing.
toward final deadline

The staff returns to work before school begins by taking individual pictures during registration. When school starts, they busy themselves taking orders, designing layouts, and writing copy. Every layout must be checked, all copy must be proofread, and pictures must be taken. With untiring effort, the staff works, sometimes on Saturdays as well as on school days, in order to meet deadlines.

WAKITAN advisers, Mr. Linus Dowell and Mrs. Anne Esson, make final checks before the pages are sent to be printed.

Juniors Marilyn Bottorff, Karen Johnson, and Cathy Hausman check identifications and measure pictures to fit layouts.

Sharon Early, Sarah Neff, Joyce Fankhauser, and Marilyn Bottorff reminisce about experiences at Workshop.
Social Studies gain renewed emphasis

"Past is Prologue" stated William Shakespeare. This is a fact that instills in students the importance of the social sciences.

Gradually, in the past few years, the pendulum has swung. There is a re-emphasis within the curriculum on humanities rather than the natural sciences and mathematics. Man is again becoming aware of the fact that if he is to establish a secure and prosperous world, he must first create an individual who is able to appreciate and maintain this society.

It is now that period in history when men realize that they don't have to be contented with what they inherited. It is now that time in history when men are realizing that it's going to take a better man, rather than a better weapon, to secure a better world.

Gloria Adams and Charles Casteel, Seniors, concentrate on learning the names and faces of several of the Senate and House of Representative leaders in their Government class.

Lecturing is a teaching technique used by Mr. Arthur Burrowes in U.S. History.

Jack Howard and Cindy Funkhauser study a map of the United States in civics class.
Pam Morehead leads a group discussion in Mr. Roger Grunwald's psychology class on the barriers confronted by man.

While contemplating on the possibility of a future world government, Keith Long studies the vastness of the earth in miniature scale during his World History class.

Mr. Burton Dunbar explains to Sherry Bechtold the handicap of man in adjusting to his various roles in his society.

Seniors, Dean Ellis, Sherry Jackson, Sally Ness display the flags of the countries belonging to the United Nations.
Mathematical world

Cool, precise, obvious, if you know the answer. This is the way it stands in the mathematical world of Central High School.

It's a world without emotions; the answers are already calculated before you discover the solutions. Math presents cold facts and figures, but it is not so mechanical that it's lacking in creativity at Central.

Probably nothing is as precise as a mathematical equation. It cannot be half right; it has to be one-hundred percent right. If less, it is wrong. So it is with the decisions of life. Your decisions will either be of benefit to you or handicap you, all depending on whether or not they were right.

Math is really not as complex as one might think. There is a procedure in finding every solution to every problem. The thing a person has to learn is the pattern of the procedure, and he will find he soon has the solution. Centralites wish only that their lives fitted in such a clear-cut pattern.

So again the analogy of math and life is illustrated. This applies in even greater intensity to the lives of math students at Central High School. They can start their four years of math with General Math or Algebra I and end a complete course with Calculus and Math Analysis. Centralites strive to take the coldness and turn it into creative thinking and reasoning; to take the precision and let it challenge their calculating minds; to take the obvious and prove it just that.
New worlds unfold

Mike Coleman, Pat Senne, Roger Wright, Jerry Riger study water electrolysis in chemistry as Mary Ward takes notes.

Science! What does it hold for us? A vast realm of unexplored principles waiting to be discovered and proven! A revolution of ideas and principles yet to change the lives of men! Unknown facts that will one day be basically essential to human environment! Science, the key to the future and the basis of the present, is man's systematic knowledge of the universe. With increasing population, the world vitally depends upon scientific development. Research is the key to this development. The field of research is so vast, that opportunity seeks out the willing and earnest.

Central is preparing prospective young scientists for the future. It offers general science, biology, chemistry, and physics, all of which acquaint the student with laboratory procedures. To keep up with the rapid pace of scientific development, Central must constantly change its materials and methods of presentation, both textbooks and equipment. The teachers themselves are responsible for being well-informed in order to present reliable data.
Students prepare for business world

Central offers a wide variety of studies for the business-minded students. Instruction from Mr. Linus Dowell and Mr. Don Francis helps the student acquire a basic knowledge of typing by the touch method. Secretarial training under the direction of Mrs. Carol Cutler and Mrs. Betty Bartles is a well-rounded course for girls interested in a secretarial career. They learn to file, to type and take shorthand with efficiency, and to write business letters. Bookkeeping and business law are taught under the direction of Mr. Robert Pumphrey. Mr. Gary Gibson teaches General Business and Business Math. Miss Nancy Canaday teaches the basic shorthand course to students.

Graduates of Central who have taken a number of the business courses offered at school are well prepared for the business world.

Ken Thom and Claudia Ousley work on practice sets in Bookkeeping class. They have one practice set each semester.

During Bookkeeping class, Mr. Robert Pumphrey explains the depreciation of capital goods to Senior Joseph Portman.

Luree Pederson, Pat Haefeli, and Ina Buis demonstrate the skills of proofreading, filing, and calculating.
During Secretarial Training class, Pam DeShon learns the proper method of filing a report from Mrs. Carol Cutler.

Mike Scott ponders the answer while the question from their General Business textbook is given to him by Pattie Worley.

Vicki Whitman and Steve Baitinger practice some of the many speed drills designed to develop their efficiency.

Chairman of the business department and typing teacher, Mr. Dowell demonstrates the use of the carriage to students.
Squaws learn skills

The Home Economics department makes various displays such as this for the different occasions of the school year.

The R.O.T.C. Luncheon, held every spring, is attended by the top ranking R.O.T.C. and school officials. The luncheon was prepared by the Home Economics classes. Ann Dunham and Carol Rich were among the girls chosen to serve the group.

Charlotte Cox, a student of Senior Homemaking, models her stylish creation as her classmates look on with interest.
Central's well-rounded curriculum offers girls many courses in practical arts under the instruction of Mrs. Doris Jean Grunwald and Mrs. Frances Lemmon. Basic knowledge of food preparation, sewing, nutrition, child care, home decoration, and personality development is offered. These courses are taught so that girls will become good homemakers, not just housekeepers. Two interesting classes open to the Senior girls, are Senior Homemaking and Marriage and Family Living. Homemaking I and II are open to every girl, and girls who are interested in a career in home economics may take advanced courses.

Evidence of the homemaking department at work is shown at the Christmas faculty meeting, open house in the spring, and the R.O.T.C. officers’ dinner. A spring exhibit is held in the main hall in order that students can receive recognition for hard work and their achievements may be observed by the entire student body.

Homemaking opens a wide field of prospective jobs. It may lead to a career in teaching, business, the fashion world, and public and social welfare, as well as the development of a good homemaker.

Mrs. Lemmon and Mary Janet Wick inspect the delicious looking casserole Vickie Perez has just removed from the oven.

Glenda Gibbs, Senior, receives help from Mrs. Grunwald in following the directions of the pattern she is using.

Margo Prentis and Janice Ball study the homemaking bulletin board which gives information on decorating and planning.
Industrial art courses provide practical

Gary Castleberry admires a completed assignment for mechanical drawing.

Mr. Walker instructs Kevin Akins, Steve Radcliffe, and Don Howe on the use of the table saw. Competence in tool use enables students to create better projects.

Janice Cantrell, student in mechanical drawing, portends the future when more women will take over technical jobs.

Herbert McGlothlin and Roger Wagers, Sophomores, sand and plane the lumber they will be using for a project in shop.
experience, training

Industrial art courses taught at Central include mechanical drawing, woodworking, and general shop. In mechanical drawing, the student learns the basic fundamentals of drawing and the principles of engineering. They learn orthographic projection, which is the study of many types of drawing including detailed, and sectional drawing. A student who takes mechanical drawing will find it helpful in any type of engineering. In woodworking and in general shop, students learn to use many complicated instruments. They study blueprinting and produce useful articles such as desks, tables, and cabinets. They find such knowledge of great value when they go into the world to find a job. In any type of industry, the ability to draw something and then to give these plans actual form is very essential for a good product.

Throughout the year they complete many such projects which correlate with each quarter's grade in this course of study.

Kevin Akins and Stanley Weston look at the many tools they learn to use in general shop to make various projects.

Arthur Williams, Craig Hunter, and John Musser admire with pride a bookcase they have just finished in woodworking.
Vocational school teaches fundamental procedures, skills

Boys at Central who are more interested in a vocational career find the St. Joseph Technical School an excellent training school. Many skills are taught at the technical school. Among these are drafting, electronics, machine shop, auto-body repair and painting, automotive mechanics and printing. In drafting, the students learn the elements of machines, electrical drafting, and architectural design. The electronics course gives boys interested in electrical engineering a background for college. After entering the training school, there are various fields in electronics a boy may enter. In machine shop, they learn to use hand tools and to read blueprints as a fundamental part of the course. In auto-body repair and painting, the students study frame alignment and wheel balancing. They learn the proper use of paint guns and enamel paints. In automotive mechanics, they prepare for intelligent diagnosis and repair involving the entire car. The principles of printing include type setting, layout, and press operation. Attendance at the St. Joseph Technical School prepares students to go on to college or to begin earning a living.
Centralites practice driving fundamentals

Central offers a course of driver education to any student fifteen and a half years of age or older who wishes to learn how to drive correctly and safely. The course begins with six weeks of classwork which is spent in the study of the Missouri driving laws and regulations. Students also learn about the parts of the car and the fundamental principles that will help them understand how the car operates.

After the students have learned the correct driving procedure, they receive practical experience through actual driving. It is the responsibility of Mr. Edwin Wallace, the driving instructor, to teach the students to drive safely and to help beginning drivers to avoid accidents. He has the job of safeguarding not only the driver's life, but also the lives of the people in the back seat who await their turn to drive. The semester course offers a good opportunity for the student to learn the laws as well as to gain driving experience.
COE prepares students for future jobs

Larry Miller explores the grocery business by working at Parisoff's Grocery Store. Here he is wrapping meat.

The Co-Operative Occupational Education (COE) program provides Central students with the knowledge and practical experience they will need in whatever vocation they choose to follow upon graduation. This program also assists each student in finding the vocation that is suited to his abilities and interests, one that will allow him to use his talents to their fullest extent and offer him personal satisfaction and opportunity for success. Through COE, students not only learn business procedure and how to apply it, but they also receive on-the-job experience from working in local business establishments.

Heading this program is Mr. Ralph Wilkinson, known to many students for his announcements over the PA system calling attention to part-time jobs open to students.

This program gives the students an idea of what it is actually like to do work in their chosen field and also gives them a chance to see if they have ability along these lines.
Students gain insight

Tony Hoehn looks on as Natalie Rothstein prepares plaster.

Doug Story, Janet Knadler work on three dimensional media, including stone carving, offered in the art department.

Jaye Griffith and Nila Maxfield admire the art work of their fellow art students. Mrs. Jane Voss is their instructor.
through creative art

The art of expressing one’s thoughts through manual design is a linkage of the past to the present. Expressive art is as old as civilization itself. Man has always felt the urge to express himself in a visual as well as an audible form. His ideas and methods have developed and changed rapidly with his changing environment and the changing times. But the age old ideas never become obsolete. Not only are they carefully studied by our art students of today, but also they are re-used by these artists. A complete and basic history of art is taught to our students. These teachings instill in them a finer appreciation for art. Along with the history, they learn the basic methods and techniques of design. Then they are given the opportunity to express their views and ideas in their own creative work.

Samples of the roles played by our Central artists are: designing publicity posters, arranging displays in the main hall, and preparing for local exhibitions.
Mixed Choirs work hard to prepare for Concert Choir

A good accompanist is essential to any choral group. Sherri Stepp, Sophomore, fills this function for Mixed Choir II.

The choir watches intently as Mr. Myers sings along while directing one of his choirs during a typical school day.

Terry Stock hands out music folders at the beginning of each class period to the members of the Mixed Choir II.

Members of choirs work diligently

Mr. Myers points out the new introductory bars to Jackie Thomas, Senior, who is the accompanist for Mixed Choir I.

The daily practice of singing the scales limbers up the vocal chords of Mixed Choir I members for a blending harmony.

Under the skilful direction of Mr. Myers, beautiful music can be heard coming from Room 22 M during fourth period.

Beautiful music, the contribution of the many Central choirs, adds charm and entertainment to many occasions. At almost any time of day one can find some type of melody ringing through the halls.

Almost half of the student body participates in Central’s music program each year. The Music Department under the direction of Mr. Byron Myers, Mr. Marvin Gench, and Mr. Duane Cunning, consists of three choirs and several Freshman choruses. The Freshman groups study the correct methods and techniques of choral singing and review the fundamentals of music. Mixed Choir II is composed mostly of sophomores broadening their knowledge of music. Mixed Choir I participates in sings for outside groups during the Christmas season. Concert Choir is the goal of many students at Central. They sing for various groups during the school year and at Baccalaureate.

In choir Central students not only gain the fine arts credit required for graduation but also learn to appreciate good music.
Supremacy is goal

One of the more widely acclaimed organizations at Central, the Concert Choir, has gained its reputation under the direction of Mr. Marvin Gench who is the Music Consultant in St. Joseph. This choir is comprised of approximately one hundred members who work long hours to make their choir a success. Their skills range from versatility in choral techniques to the interpretation of the works of varied composers. The Concert Choir feel they are very fortunate this year in having new robes. The robes are blue with white reversible collars, one side white and the other blue.

Forty-one members of the Concert Choir were chosen this year to be in the Inner Choir. This choir sings for various groups who do not have enough room for the whole Concert Choir.

Performances by the Concert Choir at school assemblies and for civic organizations bring enjoyment to many people. They also brought the joy of Christmas to many people as they combined with two other city choirs to present a T.V. program.

Music provided by three bands adds much to Central's activities, school life

PEP BAND: Fred Rau, Brooke Hickman, John Peterson, Gary Thompson, Dennis Schlicknecht, John Rausch.

Everyone loves music of one form or another and Central's three bands provide a wide variety. During football season the marching band performs on the field at halftime for our home games. Pep band generates excitement and color at pep assemblies and at football games. The stage band provides music for our assemblies. Many Central students also devote their time to the orchestra which meets after school. The majorettes work their hardest and finest to perform well with the band.

Band members learn the importance of teamwork and showmanship when they participate in such a large group. Each individual spends much time practicing and learning new music.

Central's bands are a source of pride and enjoyment for our entire community. Their accomplishments have brought them respect and admiration.
Band members work together to present

During practice the Pep Band diverts from the usual music played by the band and works on some new music to be used for pep rallies and the games during the year.

Director Mr. Cuming helps the band members practice new music.

Five majorettes watch intently as Linda Giannetta demonstrates a new phase of the performance during practice.

Jack Freeman, John Peterson, and Sherry Weigler look over the music which they will learn and perform later.

100th Anniversary

From the beginning of time man has organized his way of living so that it is controlled to fit his environment and society. At first he did this instinctively and without any real consciousness of what he had done.

As man has advanced, his civilization has become increasingly intricate. All that he does eventually affects his neighbors. Whereas his government once affected only himself, it rapidly grew into a local, state, and national concern. In this era in history, man has become not only nationalized, but internationalized. He has learned that human survival forces him into international co-operation.

Just as a nation and the world have rulers to make laws, pass judgment, and care for their general welfare, so must a school. Central's administration is headed by the school board. More directly in charge of Central are Principal Frank C. Baker, Vice-Principal Donald Trout, and Mr. Walter Halverson.

toward new goals

Mr. Frank Baker, principal, finds his daily schedule filled with various school and community activities. With each new day he ponders over new problems, always seeming to find the right answer. He is an outstanding figure in the eyes of the students and faculty at Central High. The big chief at Central is admired for his fairness and wisdom in dealing with problems. We are fortunate to have a man of such integrity in our midst.

Directing school affairs are Mr. George Blackwell who is the Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Max Coleman who is Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Instruction, and Mr. Hubert Campbell who is Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Business and Secretary to the board. These men work closely with the school board whose president is Mrs. Paul Knepper. The school board is composed of six members who receive their nomination by having their supporters sign a petition. Two members are elected every two years. At their monthly meetings, they discuss various topics, including the hiring of new teachers, the budget, and new methods and teaching techniques.
Administrative officials share duties, keep

Mr. Halverson phones parents of students to discuss discipline problems, schedule changes, and failing grades.

Mr. Trout and John Nelson, president of the student body, exemplify good will between students and administration.

Mrs. Cutler takes time out from more serious matters for a friendly chat with Janis Morton and Meredith Hickok.

New Vice-Principal Mr. Donald Trout finds his job most intriguing. He handles discipline problems, the school’s financial needs, and attendance, yet still has time for a friendly talk with individual students.

Mr. Walter Halverson, who now assumes the duties of the assistant vice-principal, has duties similar to those of the vice-principal. He works mainly with the Freshmen and helps them orient themselves to such a large school.

Dean of girls, Mrs. Carol Cutler devotes her time to counseling. She also teaches a secretarial training course.

Central’s busy office staff is friendly and efficient. Heading this staff are Mrs. Wiles who cares for attendance records, Mrs. Turner who handles permanent records, and Mrs. Krueger who handles all Annex business. As school nurse, Mrs. Fisher generally finds herself busy with students who become ill at school. Mrs. Walton is another important figure in the functioning of the school. She collects all money and pays all bills.

Assisting this busy staff are various students who work in the two offices throughout the day.

In the main office Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Krueger, Mrs. Wiles and Mrs. Walton display their usual cheerful personalities as they pose for a picture in the Wakan.
Mrs. Dorothy Coy, Freshman English teacher, begins another day of work by signing in at the Annex Office.

Centennial Centralorama theme prevails as

While the parents pass by, Karen Bechtold and Rick Ruoff explain their exhibit consisting of pictures showing the way Central's old building looked many years ago. Also shown are some of the attendance records that were kept.

Janie Baker talks with Ronda Thomas, Susan Clark, and Pat Senne about GAA awards displayed on Patrons' Night.

Pat Meakins, a band member, shows the spectators pictures of the new band uniforms that were purchased this year.
parents go back to school Patrons' Night

The swishing sounds of long satin dresses, the vapor of musty documents from years past and an air of expectancy permeate the atmosphere of Central's annual Patrons' Night.

Dominated by the theme of Centennial Centrorama, the night was highlighted by exhibitions and costumes from the past. Central's administration, faculty, and student body, under the supervision of Mrs. Virginia Frazier, pulled out of the past numerous documents pertaining to Central's history. Each department displayed books and various objects pertaining to their field.

Patrons' Night gives the parents and teachers an opportunity to discuss the objectives of teaching and the difficulties various students encounter at Central. The night was also set aside to honor Central's former alumni and the centennial graduating class.

Patrons' Night found parents looking at various exhibits displayed by the departments. Parents glance over many old OUTLOOKS, some of which date back to 1917.

Mr. Edwin Wallace visits with former Central teachers Mrs. Lucia McDonald, Miss Vita Slater, and Miss Neva Wallace.

Barbara Hornaday and Sharon Den-Ouden, two of the hostesses, wait at the door to pass out ribbons to the alumni.

Senior Sarah Neff serves as a hostess at the exhibition for the WAKITANS. The WAKITANS date back to 1900.
Al Field pauses for a moment of relaxation in surroundings cluttered by items collected throughout the school year.

Central's chief engineer, Mr. Edward Swoboda, checks and regulates the heating system before he begins the day.

Custodian, John Tracy, begins his daily sweeping route through the halls.
workers set pace for Central's efficiency

Seldom spoken of or heard from, but often seen, describes the workers in Central's halls and cafeteria. The custodians and cafeteria workers have proven invaluable to the efficiency and management of Central. The custodians come to work at 7:00 and leave at 4:30. These gentlemen work five and a half days keeping Central in "tip-top" condition.

Meal preparation, by the cafeteria workers, gets under way at 7:00 in the morning. The final dish is put away and the aprons put up at 2:00 in the afternoon. Day in and day out their services prove consistent and their devotion unwavering.

Since the beginning of time man has felt a dependence upon other people. He has felt a need for companionship.

In our own age one still finds this need for companionship reflected in organization and planning. The modern world has placed great emphasis on these two fields. Clubs at Central provide this kind of experience and teach the fundamentals that our highly organized society requires.

Different groups are available to present the student a wide representation of interests. This enables the student to sample the many different fields the world has to offer.
Centralites serve school through Council offices, cabinet

President of the Student Council John Nelson listens intently as council committee chairmen give their reports.

Mary Ann Harner, treasurer of the Student Council, seeks the aid of Mrs. Walton in balancing her treasury books.

Kevin Neuman, vice-president of the Student Council, presides at assemblies in the absence of the president.

Typing the minutes following council meetings is one of Marie Potter's duties as secretary of the Student Council.

Members of the Cabinet meet with the Student Council officers and sponsor to discuss topics to be proposed at the next Council meeting. Cabinet members are Howard Hines, Tripper Gnehz, Linda Moen, Janice Means, and Jim Beaver.

During Student Council meeting, John Nelson and Marie Potter, officers, discuss varied problems with the members.

One of Central's most active and efficient organizations is the Student Council. It is composed of the student body officers, class officers, representatives, and the cabinet.

During the meetings that are held every other week, the members discuss important affairs, problems, proposals, and money-making projects. Representatives keep the students informed by reading the minutes and by answering any questions they may have. Committee chairmen report the progress of their committees.

The Student Council sponsors the Christmas and Spring Dances each year. This year they also sponsored the Centennial Week which included a dance. The Council is in charge of car registration, lost and found, and the question box. Each spring, they conduct campaigns with nominations and elections for the coming year. New representatives are elected each semester. An "M" average is required of each candidate.

Representing Central's student body and maintaining her democratic spirit is a difficult job. Mr. Byron Myers assists and directs as the Student Council sponsor.
Student Council representatives promote close ties between students, administration.

Senior Howard Hines proves his salesmanship by selling All-School Play tickets to leading lady Barbara Hornaday.

Ronnie Drain, Senior Student Council representative, remarks the minutes of the last meeting to home room students.

Various council committees help set pace for Student Council business, activities

Rick Starks checks off names as David Dunning, Dan Radke, and Ted Enyard wait to vote in the council election.

Rick Shoemaker, Council Ways and Means Committee chairman, sells Central bookcovers to Jim Beaver and Linda Moen.

Bev Frank and Diana Vetter, co-chairmen of the Assembly Committee, discuss the programs for upcoming assemblies.

Linda Moen assists Barb Fricke and Susie Smith, Ideals and Ethics co-chairmen, address cards to hospitalized students.

Tacking up safety posters is among the duties of Jim Beck, Student Council Building, Grounds, and Safety Chairman.

Senior Student Council members, Marvin Mathewson, Linda Moen, Jim Beaver, Howard Hines, Judy Hinesbeck, and Rick Shoemaker discuss plans for Centennial Week. The week of March 21-25 will be devoted to the Centennial celebration.

Milt Wood, appointed by the president to be in charge of the Question Box, reads a question and considers an answer.

Howard Hines and Marvin Mathewson, trophy chairmen, clean and polish the trophies and their cases once a month.
N.H.S. initiates attain highest honors awarded by Central Developing the qualities of character, service, scholarship, and leadership necessary for admittance into the National Honor Society, requires years of hard work. These individuals are chosen from the upper twenty-five per cent of the Senior Class and upper twenty per cent of the Junior Class. Faculty and Society members then vote on these students' scholastic and leadership abilities.

Kathy Abersold, a National Honor Society member since her junior year, gives service speech at the annual assembly.

Newly elected Juniors and Seniors sign traditional book of membership at the annual National Honor Society assembly.

Leaders initiate ideas

Members of the Senior Leadership Club are chosen by the previous year's club members. They are expected to maintain an "M" average and to be potential leaders within their own class and the student body.

Their efforts and projects are gradually being seen at Central. They have organized the boys' cheerleaders, placed safe-driving signs in the parking lot, and initiated plans for Centennial Week.

President Ronnie Drain attempts to illustrate, for members, the size of the letters for the new sign in the parking lot.

Members Kevin Newman, Marie Potter, Jim Hower, and John P. White listen intently as the president explains the benefits of placing a safety sign at the parking lot's entrance.
Club voices opinions

Forum Club is the oldest club at Central. It serves as the meeting ground for high ranking social science students to meet and debate on current affairs and to hear guest speakers. Their debates range from the Viet Nam situation to the War on Poverty program. Sponsored by Miss Ruth Spangberg and Mr. Arthur Burrowes, the students are guided into an area of knowledge concerning international and domestic affairs faced by the U.S.

Club members learn about medical fields

John Peterson and Janie Wilcox get some practice in first aid while bandaging Steve Cole’s wrist in Central’s clinic. Members find their knowledge of first aid useful.

The Medical Careers Club is one of the many service organizations at Central. Sponsored by Mrs. H. C. Senne, the club offers the student an opportunity to learn more about the different fields of medicine. The student also learns about First Aid. The club meets once a month to discuss the medical professions with various speakers. These speakers include doctors, nurses, and technicians.

Rick Butler keeps a close eye on the "patient", Ken Thom.
FTA views education as key to freedom

A nation must be open to knowledge and free to learn if it is to maintain its prosperity and world leadership. The Future Teachers of America instills in its members this principle. This organization was established at Central eleven years ago. It is sponsored by Miss Mary Hash. The members go to the annual meeting of the regional Future Teachers each year. They also sponsor an annual donation to the Muchenberger Center.

Millie Magner pays treasurer Peggy Bumphrey the club dues. These dues form the annual Christmas donation to Muchenberger Center.

Priscilla Evans, Miss Mary Hash, Peggy Bumphrey and James Lowrance discuss ways of increasing the club's membership.

CLUBS HELP ENCOURAGE CREATIVE ABILITIES

The Brush and Pencil Club, sponsored by Mrs. Jane Voss, is comprised of students who wish to sketch and paint outside class as well as during the class period. The club takes field trips, examines great paintings, and discusses famous painters and sculptors during their meetings. The members also have an opportunity to examine each other's work and to express helpful opinions. This year the club has transformed a small storeroom into an art gallery used to exhibit the displays made by the members. Also numerous travel exhibits were displayed. This was the first year in which the club attempted any project of this size.

Another club that encourages creativity is Quill and Scroll. Seniors ranking in the upper one-third of the class who are staff members on either the OUTLOOK or the WAKITAN may become members of the club. Meetings are infrequent because the club is honorary. Membership is determined by Mrs. Florence McCoy and Mr. Linus Dowell. Mrs. McCoy is the OUTLOOK adviser and the Quill and Scroll sponsor. Mr. Dowell is the adviser for the WAKITAN. The club's members are honored in an assembly each year.
Chess, Math Clubs challenge Centralities

Any Centralite with a grade average of "S" is eligible to become a member of the Math Club, a chapter of Mu Alpha Theta, national mathematics club. The club, sponsored by Mr. Leo Schmitz, meets twice a month offering students an opportunity to discuss mathematical principles and to learn of new advances being made in this field.

The Chess Club, sponsored by Mrs. Anne Esson, also meets bi-monthly. To gain membership, a student must pass a chess test and be voted on by the membership. The members strive to improve their skills in the game of chess.
Central teams debate controversial issues

The Debate Team, sponsored by Miss Marsha Eichenberg, is a new organization at Central this year. The topic was Compulsory Federal Arbitration. Their first debate was with Lafayette High School. On the affirmative team were Mike Kelly and Andy Thomas; on the negative team were Corrine McNeily and Francis Bond. Central’s affirmative team won the debate.

The main purpose of the team is to stimulate interest in today’s events and more freedom in voicing opinions.

Y-Teens donate time, service to community

One of the many organizations for girls in St. Joseph is the Y-Teen groups. These groups meet every two weeks to make plans for their service and money-making projects.

Each Y-Teen group must do at least two service projects a semester. Charity receives one-half of the Y-Teens profits from all money-making projects.

Along with working projects, the Y-Teen girls find time for an occasional party. All Y-Teen groups join together at the end of the year to sponsor the Cinderella Ball.

Language clubs promote cultural interest

In addition to regular Spanish classes, students can join the Spanish Club. A first-year student with an "S" average or a second-year student with an "M" average is eligible for membership. New officers for the club are elected every semester. The meetings are held on the first Tuesday of every month, and Spanish is the only language spoken. At the meetings, the members listen to guest speakers, learn about Spanish-speaking countries and their customs, and play Spanish games.

French speaking students expand their interests by participating in French Club activities. Mrs. Rolande Pinkerton sponsors the club which meets one Wednesday of every month in the home of a volunteer host. The meetings are conducted in French and French foods are served to create an air of authenticity.

Students with an "S" average after first-year French and those maintaining an "S" average in following years of French are eligible for membership in the club.
Student workers add to office efficiency

The Main and Annex Office Staffs perform some of the functions of the administrative department. They collect absentee slips from the rooms each period, deliver mail and absentee sheets to the teachers, run errands for the office workers, and deliver passes. Some of their other duties are to guide visitors or new students and to assist Mrs. Turner in posting grades. With the assistance of these groups, the office runs more efficiently.
Library staff aids students, Librarian

Central's library runs smoothly and efficiently due to the efforts of thirty volunteers supervised by Miss Lois McClanahan. These workers devote an hour of their day to library work. They spend this hour checking books in and out, arranging them according to the Dewey Decimal System, keeping records of the new books, and repairing those which need it.

Central is fortunate in having two libraries. The library in the annex is equivalent to that of a Junior High School and is used chiefly by the Freshmen and Sophomores. There are approximately 12,000 volumes in the two libraries plus 1,000 volumes distributed throughout the classrooms. Each month Central receives seventy magazines. The libraries are open from 7:30 in the morning to 3:30 in the afternoon. During this time students may go in and study.

Members of the library staff, Peggy Thompson, Ann Landis, and Jerri Tarwater, prepare cards for the card catalogue.

Stage crew members Rick Dillon, Jim Bowlin, and Dale Frankum, find they must pull together to do their job efficiently.

Among the service groups at Central are the fire chiefs, stage crew, and projectionists. The services of these groups are invaluable to the efficiency of the educational program of Central High School.

Each fire chief, appointed by his home room, has the responsibility of seeing that all the students evacuate the building safely and that all the windows and doors are closed. Mr. Wilkinson is the director of the fire chiefs.

Behind the scenes at every assembly and play is the stage crew. Under the direction of Mr. Castle, the boys operate the stage curtain and lights, and handle the props and sound effects.

Since educational films have become so essential to Central’s teaching program, many students have been trained to operate the projectors. These students are under the direction and supervision of Mr. Mackey.

Mr. Mackey instructs Bill Rossi in operating and threading of projection machines as Ron Mathis observes carefully.

Physical fitness was essential to the survival of primitive man. His physical strength determined whether or not he ate every day or if he lived to see another sunrise. The cave man's code of life was the survival of the fittest.

Though man is more dependent today upon the resources of his mind, physical strength is not neglected. The President has a Council on Physical Fitness and schools are undergoing changes in their physical education programs. Central boys must take one year of gym or sports and one year of ROTC. Intramural sports competition is also available. Girls are now required to take gym every day for two years. They also may participate in GAA.
Newest activities in gym program include pole dancing, shuttle hockey, isometrics.

John Crandell, Freshmen, finds that climbing a rope is good exercise.

Susan Clark and Vicki Jones play a game of ping-pong during their third period gym class against gym assistant Janie Acord and her partner, Cathy Hausman.

On the isometric bars Freshmen Bruce Aldridge and Brian Stuppy do some of the stunts which they learned from Coach Dave Swihart in their gym class.

Mike George is quite successful at pinning his opponent Wayne King.

Five girls demonstrate bamboo pole dancing, a new activity which has been added to the gym program this year. Pole dancing helps the girls develop co-ordination.

Freshmen and Sophomore gym girls enjoy a game of shuttle hockey, a sport which offers fun as well as relaxation.

Physical fitness receives much stress as a requirement for good health. Central's physical education program includes varied activities and sports designed to improve posture, physical development, and general fitness.

Freshman and Sophomore girls, taught by Mrs. Baker and Miss Creighton, spend an hour every day in various activities. These include basketball, soccer, ping-pong, badminton, horseshoes, volleyball, baseball, and exercises.

Taught by Mr. Swihart, Freshmen boys participate in tumbling, basketball, calisthenics, isometrics, and baseball.

These classes add recreation to the student's school day, and teach sportsmanship as well.

Freshmen boys, John Crandell, Bruce Aldridge and Brian Stuppy do push-ups to develop strength in their arms.
Outstanding GAA

The Girl's Athletic Association, under the direction of Mrs. Gladys Baker and Miss Mary Ellen Creighton, offers to all Central's squaws the opportunity to enjoy a versatile program of athletic competition. It includes such sports as flag football, archery, volleyball, basketball, bowling, swimming, badminton, and softball.

A girl taking part in the major sports may work for a letter requiring 1800 points, a pin for 2800, or the highest award for 4000, a trophy.

Besides sports, the GAA sponsors a play-day and a banquet. Play-day is attended by girls from area high schools who enjoy here a day of joint competition in sports. A banquet is held for the GAA Board members and the Senior letter girls. The board is made up of managers who control the activities for each sport. They also publish and sell the student directories. The GAA sponsors and decorates for the homecoming dances and the basketball queen coronation.

This sports program provides a variety of activities which widen the girls' interests.

Central cadets seek honors, give service

The ROTC, Reserve Officers Training Corps, is an important part of the curriculum for all boys at Central. This program is mandatory for sophomores, but many upperclassmen choose to continue it, aiming for higher goals in rank and leadership. Its main purpose is to prepare boys for future military service and to encourage them to select service in the armed forces as a career. It presents an opportunity to learn the tradition and common courtesies in and out of the army, and to apply basic first aid. It is a training ground for boys to learn to both give and take orders.

Cadets who have met the requirements are eligible for a number of positions of honor, including the MP’s, the Saber, Honor, and Color Guards. Those cadets with the ranking of SFC may join Central’s ROTC club, the Shield and Spear. Outstanding cadets are honored by being chosen to be members of the Battalion and Special Staffs. After long hours of practice, the best drill squad represents Central at the annual ROTC Review.

When man first lived on the earth, he was confronted with many problems. He had to obtain food and provide shelter for himself and his family. He had to protect himself from wild beasts and other hazards of nature. After many centuries man started developing methods which would make his work easier. Then he had time for things of pleasure.

As sports were a challenge in early days, so they are today. Only now, the challenge is not necessarily a matter of survival. It is a matter of satisfaction—satisfaction in competing with individuals and attaining a satisfactory performance.
Central triumphs as city gridiron champs

After three weeks of practicing on hot, August days, the 1965 football team opened its season with a victory over the three other St. Joseph high schools in the annual Jamboree. Defeating them once again, the Tribe claimed the City League title. The Varsity tallied seven wins, against two losses.

This year, Joplin was added to the roster of schools played. Springfield Central and Hillcrest provided added competition for the Tribe.

Under the direction of Mr. Roger Grunwald, Head Coach, the coaching staff consisted of Mr. Gary Sprague, Mr. Jim Taylor, Mr. Don Francis, Mr. E. J. Pecoraro, Mr. Gus Sarris, Mr. Howard Iba, and Mr. Milton Day.

After reluctantly retiring from the action of the game, guard Mark Minter has his injured ankle taped by a doctor.

acquire victories, honors, defeats, bruises

Opening the season by scoring thirteen points in the annual Jamboree, Central laid the foundation for a successful record of seven wins and two losses. The Tribe’s Jamboree victory, led by the touchdown of Tripper Gench, the 75-yard sprint to the goal line by Barry Reynolds, and the conversion kick by Tom Martin placed a seven-point margin over Lafayette. Benton and C.B. failed to score.

Barry Reynolds led the attack against C.B. by scoring touchdowns of twelve and seventy yards. Tom Martin’s two conversions and Dennis Thompson’s sneak over the goal line tallied a total of twenty points, compared to C.B.’s score of zero.

At Springfield Central, Mike Linder led the defense to hold the Bulldogs at a 14-12 margin over the Tribe. Dennis Thompson’s pass to Ted Enyard sent him to the end zone. Charles Blakley dashed 55 yards for the second touchdown, and Tom Martin kicked the two extra points.

The Tribe met a stinging defeat of 14-0 when Joplin prevented them from moving inside the 25-yard line. The defensive squad exhibited its durability and spirit in the fourth quarter as it held the Eagles at the one-yard line.

Hillcrest of Springfield upset the Indians with a 13-6 defeat in the Homecoming game. Ted Enyard, aided by Howard Hines, Don Summers, and Ron Roberts, led Central’s defensive attack with consistently good tackling. John Nelson intercepted a Hillcrest pass and Dennis Thompson scored the only touchdown for the Tribe.

The highlight of the season, the 26-21 defeat of Benton, gave the City League Football Championship title to the Indians. With 28 seconds left in the game, and Benton leading 21-20, Tripper Gench scored his second touchdown of the night to save the game. Frank Hicks’ touchdown and Tom Martin’s two conversion kicks added to the winning score.

Halfback Charles Blakley led the Tribe to victory against North Kansas City with two 65-yard dashes to pay dirt. Touchdowns by Frank Hicks and Tripper Gench, and an extra point kicked by Tom Martin totaled 25 points. Mike George, Mark Minter, and Greg Dymond held the opponents to only one touchdown.

Tribe takes third in Class L Regional

It is a tense moment in the Central - C.B. game as Ted Engard jumps high to sink a basket for the Indian Tribe.

T. W. Nance’s jump shot is obstructed by two of Marysville’s alert guards.

Many hours of practice, hard work, and concentration represent the determination and spirit exhibited in the 1965-66 basketball season. Although the record was 9-17, six games were lost by five or fewer points.

The cage season opened with Mr. Howard Iba coaching the team to three straight victories. Bad luck then set in with a string of defeats. Following a slightly disappointing season, the Indian team quenched its final thirst for victory by capturing third place in the Class L Regional Tournament.

Assisting Head Coach Iba were Mr. Milton Day, reserve coach, and Mr. Gary Sprague, the Freshman coach.

These five team members receive tips from Coach Howard Iba during a time-out in a City League game with Benton.

Under the experienced coaching of Roger Grunwald, Central's cindermen sprinted to new heights in the '65 season. Central's record for the track season was 6 wins to 1 loss.

Track is a strenuous sport involving individual as well as team competition. Long hours are spent in practice and training, and the result is a winning team such as represented Central during the 1965 track season.

Central wrestlers capture All-City title

Central wrestlers watch as Coach Taylor demonstrates a method that should bring Mike George down on the mat.

This is the third season for wrestling at Central. Coached by Mr. Jim Taylor, the team has had a very successful year, having won the majority of its meets. The team won the City Wrestling Tournament and six Central wrestlers placed on the All City Wrestling Team.

The boys who participated in wrestling find that the sport helps them to develop both physically and mentally. In order to win a fall, a wrestler must have bodily strength and agility plus the mental ability to outwit his opponent.

Joe Battreall seems to enjoy pinning Rick Thompson as the boys prepare for an important meet with another team.
Swimmers practice for team competition

The boys who make-up Central's swim team find the sport exciting and fun. The team uses the facilities of the YMCA for practice and for city meets. Many out-of-town meets are planned for the team during the season. Central's swim team is coached by Mr. Ernie Pecoraro.

Although speed is important in competition, strength and stamina are also essential. Central swimmers strive to develop these traits.

A fast start is important in relays and other events. It can mean the difference between winning or losing a meet.

Although the swim team is serious about winning its meets, these boys find that a practice session is not all work.

Golf, tennis teams compete in area meets

The golf team, coached by Mr. Jim Perry, concluded their season by placing fifth in the District City Golf Meet. They also placed third in the William Jewell Tournament.

The tennis team, under the direction of Coach Roger Swank, completed their season with three wins and seven losses. Five of the various matches played were held at Lawrence, Kansas.

On a day when weather makes outdoor practice impossible, Coach Roger Swank diagrams a tennis play for Tim Walley.

While the team prepares for spring competition, Jim Beck gets advice concerning his grip from Coach Jim Perry.

Athletes strive for "C" Club membership

One of the largest clubs at Central is the "C" Club. It is composed of about fifty athletes who have won letters in various sports at Central. Each sport has special standards for acceptance into the club. Every year the "C" Club sells ball-point pens as a money-making project to help buy sports equipment.

"Victory for Varsity" is the cry of cheerleader Jo Sue Michaels as she cheers the Central Indians at a pep assembly.

Cheerleaders chant "Who's gonna win?" The cheerleaders play an important role in the encouragement of team support.
"Let's go Big Blue"

High jumps, splits, voices that carry well, and a knowledge of sports are qualifications possessed by Central’s cheerleaders. Many girls vie for the title, but only twelve achieve the honor each year. These girls practice long hours before they present their skills to the student body, after which students make their choices in homerooms.

New cheerleaders work all summer to perfect old cheers and learn new ones. A clinic is provided by the cheerleaders for those girls interested in learning the cheers and jumps. These cheers are shown to the Pep Squad and used to cheer our team to victory, whether they are at home or out of town.

Central students say “thanks” for our cheerleaders and the fine job they do in promoting enthusiasm and sportsmanship in all our sports.

"Victory" is the cry of cheerleader Sherrill Mannschreck as she proudly leaps for the Indians at a pre-game pep rally.
Battle cries and war chants ring out as Indian Pep Squad anticipates victory. Vigorous stomps accompany excitement.

The Pep Band swings to the tune of "When the Indians Go Marching In". Kooky hats and lively tunes set their pace.
Indian pep rallies spark sport season

Our cheerleaders shout, "Is Central High gonna win this game?" and the Pep Squad replies enthusiastically, "Well, yes!" These 200 girls work diligently all during the football, basketball, and track seasons to perfect their cheers and to spur our team to victory.

The Sophomore, Junior, and Senior classes compose the Pep Squad, with the officers elected at the beginning of the year by all members. They hold regular meetings on the second Wednesday of each month to take care of any business and to practice old and new cheers.

The blue and white uniforms with the Indian insignias form a colorful background at all the Tribe’s games and pep assemblies. The pep assemblies are held during the school day to promote attendance and sportsmanship at the night's game.

Jim Beck and Jim Beaver demonstrate how opponents apply their "protectives" before vying with the Central Indians.

Does George Fridell have a new secret for securing victory?

Pep assemblies arouse student support for the team. Linda Sigars keeps time, while Linda Heaston dreams of victory.
To each and every queen, Central owes a debt for the enthusiasm and grace that they have contributed to the Homecomings—a debt that will be paid in memories they will cherish.

The football candidates start selling season's football tickets as soon as school is out in the spring. A frenzy of selling tickets, writing letters, and counting money fills the summer months. The student body then selects the queen by popular vote.

The basketball queen is chosen in a different manner. Candidates are nominated by the basketball team, then are judged on poise, speech, beauty, and personality by an impartial panel.

Central honors her royalty with solemn and memorable ceremonies. This is the best way she can express her gratitude and appreciation.
Nora reigns over gridiron Homecoming

Warm weather and sunshine mean not only suntans and swimming parties to some senior girls, but also hard work and a chance to test their salesmanship. These girls compete for the coveted title of Central's Football Queen.

Each girl must sell at least $100 worth of season tickets in order to be eligible for student balloting in the fall. The girl who receives the largest number of votes from the students and from the total amount of tickets sales earns the title of Football Queen. She reigns over all Homecoming Activities including the bonfire, game, and dance.

Queen Sherrill wins cagers’ recognition

Hopes and dreams are answered for some Senior girls when the names of the candidates for Basketball Queen are announced. These girls are nominated by members of the basketball team and are judged by prominent St. Joseph citizens. Questions are asked about each girl’s plans after graduation, interests, and ideas on varying subjects. The girls are also judged on appearance, poise, and manners.

The queen, her maid of honor, and attendant are presented to the student body at the Homecoming pep assembly and the queen is crowned at the beginning of the game. She is escorted by members of the basketball team and reigns over the game and also the Homecoming Dance held in the gym following the game.
Queen Linda reigns during track season

Track queen candidates ask Central students for support during the contest for the title of Central Track Queen. Each girl must sell a large number of tickets in order to acquire enough votes to be chosen queen. The girl representing Central then goes into the city finals for the title of City Track Queen. This girl reigns over the City Track Meet in which schools from the surrounding areas participate.

Obtaining the title of Track Queen represents hours of hard work and planning and is an honor that will be remembered for years to come.
Following in her sister’s footsteps, Ann Landis reigns as Queen of the Christmas Dance. She shares her throne with Central’s Friendliest Boy, Dennis Thompson. The lucky couple was selected by the students attending the dance.

Central students select, honor Royalty

While crown-bearer Carol Tracy watches, train-bearers Cinda Jackson and Catherine Hayward have to help Queen Nora Crouch, who is too nervous to button her gloves. Queen Nora expresses her thanks to the student body during Coronation.
Before the assembly, queen attendants and their escorts gather in Room 112 to receive bouquets and boutonnieres.

Basketball Queen Sherrill Mannschreck telephones her parents to tell them of her election while attendants Mary Ann Harner and Judy Hilsabeck wait their turns.

Filled with emotion, Nora Crouch grabs Meredith Herzog's arm on hearing the results of the football queen election.

Basketball Queen Sherrill Mannschreck is congratulated by the cheerleaders after her pre-game coronation in the gym.

Vice-President Rick Starks escorts Track Queen Linda Adkins to the field to be crowned during the city track meet.
With the pressures of studies, time for relaxation and fun has assumed a heightened importance to Centralites. One-hundred years ago, leisure time was spent in the family circle. This small group provided shelter for the children, but did not expose them to the outside world.

Today the life of a student is much more complex, not only in studies, but also in the manner in which he uses his leisure time. An important part of the educational process is association with other people. By participation in school life through the year, the student samples the various types of activities and acquires for himself a fuller knowledge of human relations. All these things enhance the joy and excitement of a complete school year.
Day of registration begins new activities

Registration Day is a day of business, fun, and tension. It is a time for making new acquaintances and renewing old ones. It is an emotion-filled day for all Centralites. For Seniors it marks the beginning of their last year of high school. For Freshmen it is a bewildering day full of new friends and experiences. For the office staff, Registration Day is the day to sell activity tickets and assign lockers.

Mr. Bray points a warning finger at a nervous underclassman on Registration Day and instructs him to "say cheese."

Juniors, Jim Allaman and Mark Reichel, pass by Mrs. Walton to pay for activity tickets and make their locker deposits.

On Registration Day, Ted Enyard and Thomas Phoenix order class rings from the Balfour ring company's representative.

On Registration Day, Tim Tucker gets his locker assignment from Junior Jayne Minton and graduate Carolyn Hilsabeck.

Before the game, Centralites gather around the flaming hornet in the bonfire, the symbol of anticipated victory.

Students take time out from a busy schedule to sign their names on the papier-mâché hornet, Hillcrest's mascot.

Homecoming activities

From their places of honor at the game, homecoming royalty encourage their team to fight hard for another touchdown.

Everyone is encouraged to buy on Color Day. Prospective customers Larry Hawkins and Sharon Hudson look over items.

Homecoming Queen Nora Crouch lights the traditional bonfire which sends a replica of the opponent's mascot up in flames.
Homecoming preparations begin early as the queen election is held, the hornet is built and placed in the main hall, and plans are made for the dance. Announcements are made to promote Color Day and the coronation is planned.

On the morning of homecoming, Color Day captains assemble before school and are assigned to their stations. They swamp students in an attempt to sell their merchandise to make money to finance the Junior-Senior Prom. The pep band and cheerleaders, leading a small parade through the halls, stir up enthusiasm with cheers and songs.

On the evening of the game, Centralites gather around the bonfire which is lit by the 1965 Homecoming Queen, Nora Crouch. After the bonfire, the cheerleaders, pep squad, and other Centralites join hands for the snake dance. Then the pep squad lines up to form the victory line and cheer as the team and coaches run onto the field. Just before the game begins, the attendants are escorted to their seats and the queen is saluted by the Saber and Honor Guards. As a final homecoming activity, a dance is held in the cafeteria.
Arnell Rucker, Margaret Minor, Harvey Johnson, Marcia Morgan, and Barbara Davis demonstrate modern popular dances.

Variety show sets pace for Centennial

Long hours of work are forgotten as the curtain rises on the acts of the Senior Variety Show. The theme, Centralia '66, was portrayed by a variety of acts, ranging from the centuries old minuet to the modern dances such as the Frug, Jerk, and Pony. The audience was also entertained by Jim Beaver and Marsha Rowe who introduced each act with witty commentary. The Seniors' trip into the past was made all the more lively and colorful by the original and home-made costumes of the Seniors.

Mary Ward and Nancy Watson pantomine to "Tiptoe Through the Tulips", a comical act presented in the Variety Show.

Variety Show Seniors of "sixty-six" whisk us back to the Roaring Twenties as they revive the memorable Charleston.
Drama plays convey Yuletide message

Central's drama classes helped to start the Christmas season with laughs and a reminder of the true meaning of Christmas. These plays were given to the student body at a number of hour-long assemblies during the week preceding the Christmas holidays.

The themes of the plays ranged from the comical actions of a typical high school teacher and her principal, to the sentimental boyhood memories of a well-to-do man who makes a strange agreement with the people who wish to buy his home. The problems of a young girl and her worried mother before the big Christmas dance lent an entertaining air to the holiday assembly, while the antics of a miserly old man and his family brought smiles to the faces of those enjoying this play.
Saluted by the Saber Guard, Sherrill Mannschreck approaches the center of the auditorium where she is to be crowned the Central High Basketball Queen of 1966.

After receiving her crown, Sherrill Mannschreck makes an acceptance speech to the team and the student body.

Homecoming highlights basketball season

During the half-time of the homecoming game, Tripper Gench has the honor of crowning Queen Sherrill Mannschreck.

Basketball homecoming begins with Color Day, sponsored by the Junior Class. The Juniors sell everything from hats to key chains and class buttons. During half-time at the game, the homecoming queen is crowned. Later in the gym, students enjoy music and dancing.

As the newly crowned queen, Sherrill throws the basketball into the game at the beginning of the second half of play.
Centralites stage How to Succeed

Breaking for coffee, the office staff of the World Wide Wickets Company discovers the coffee-maker doesn't work.

"How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" by Frank Loesser and Abe Burrowes was the title of this year's All-School Play. Hard work and long hours of rehearsal made the play a solid success.

The leading male and female roles were shared by Bill Clinkenbeard and Hugh Kranitz as Finch, and Barbara Hornaday and Mary Jo Jansén as Rosemary. Other leading roles were played by Jim Beaver as J. B. Biggley and Mary Burkert as Hedy LaRue.

The stage crew working behind the scenes also contributed to the success of the play.

Spirits run high and posters are hung higher as junior classmen vie for Student Council offices for next year. Song titles and old clichés are used as slogans for the seven foot posters which are hung in the main hall for all to see.

Juniors compete for student body offices

John Nelson, candidate for President of the student body, gives his acceptance speech during the nominating assembly.

"The meeting will now come to order." With these words the weeks of hard work and planning begin to take shape. Student council candidates, their campaign managers, and the underclassmen chosen to give the seconding speeches begin the campaign. The victorious students face a tremendous task of representing 2,100 students. We are proud of the efficiency and high degree of excellence obtained by our Student Council.

An air of France is brought to the Crystal Room of the Hotel Robidoux as these spirited mademoiselles, Lana Guyer, Sherry Hope, Linda Gorsuch, Sally Ness, Margaret Sharp, Kathy Johns, Julia Ross, and Melanie Lott, dance the Can-Can.

Old World comes to language students

A sidewalk cafe was recreated to add gaiety and charm to the French banquet. Saucy French mademoiselles displayed their dancing talents by giving wide-eyed spectators a glimpse of the traditional Can-Can. The menu and the President's speech of welcome, both in French, cause some confusion for first year students.

Latin students enjoy small-talk and good food while being waited on by first year Latin slaves. Togas and sandals or bare feet are common. Numerous skits are also presented for the evening's entertainment.

Bill Clinkenbeard, Austen Bainter, and Judy Hilsabeck participate in the play "Pyramus and Thisbe" spoken in Latin.

Before the annual Latin banquet convenes, Barbara Fricke, Sophomore, adjusts the pin which keeps her stola in place.

provide entertainment for student body

Assemblies provide the students and faculty with a welcome break from their regular busy schedule. Some of them are educational, some inspirational, some entertaining, but all are enjoyed by the student body as a whole.

Since the auditorium is too small to seat the entire student body, each hour-long assembly is presented twice. The band performs both before and after each assembly. In these assemblies, students are given a taste of international culture, a better knowledge of science and history, and the opportunity to see outstanding talent.

Mario Escudero, a native of Spain, captures his Centralite audience with the lively, flowing music of Flamenco guitar.

In one of the many skits presented at the pep assemblies, Jim Beaver plays the role of a member of the opposing team.

Pep assemblies, designed to inspire enthusiasm and boost school spirit, are presented weekly by the cheerleaders.
"Hawaiian Paradise" sets scene of Prom

Hawaii, the Paradise, the theme for the Junior-Senior Prom sponsored by the Junior class, brought exotic beauty to the lives of Central students. Intermission entertainment was provided by a quartet of four Juniors, The Keystones. Palm trees, leis, and the Hula mixed with the "Swim" and the "Pony" helped make the Prom a big success.

Commencement ends chapter for Seniors

A last check of caps and gowns is made and the procession of graduating Seniors moves toward the platform. Four years of hard work and fun ends and a new life begins. Proud parents watch as their children accept their diplomas and close a happy and memorable chapter of their lives.

Past memories of Central rush through the mind of every Senior as each awaits this long anticipated moment. Parents, relatives, and friends look on with great pride as the graduation exercises commence in the gymnasium.
Central is all students working together to form one student body. In Central's one-hundred years, the school's enrollment has grown from 60 students to the present 2,500. Though the school has changed, the students' high ideals and philosophies have remained basically the same. The Freshmen always show a certain amount of hesitation, but are soon a part of the school. The expectation of the Sophomores grows as they look forward to the last half of their career at Central. Juniors have that special feeling of anticipation awaiting the day when they, like the Seniors, will star at graduation. Central is therefore a blending of individual accomplishments.
Freshman class officers Tom Bonebrake, president; Cindie Trullinger, secretary; Nancy Bocock, treasurer; and John Carter, vice president, find the duties few, the experience helpful for future years.

Freshmen become part of school spirit

Mrs. Pertain, cheerful freshman counselor, checks schedule cards and keeps records on Central High's largest class.

"Yell, Freshmen, yell." Silence was their reply to the cheerleaders' command during the first pep assembly. Once again the plight of the Freshmen new to Central was demonstrated. But this situation happens many times before they feel themselves a real part of Central.

Freshmen have new friendships formed during years of hard work and extra-curricular activities to look forward to. In the short time they are a part of Central, students join clubs, participate in sports, belong to Hi-Y and Y-Teen, represent their class at student council meetings, and set high standards for their class.

Freshmen must not only choose subjects that will be beneficial and interesting, but will also provide the required credits for graduation. The required curriculum for freshmen is civics, English, and physical education. Choice of electives gives the Freshmen a feeling of independence for the first time in their schooling. In a few short weeks, the freshmen find themselves caught up in the school life of Central.

Typical freshmen, Sue Berry and John Humphrey, look up to upperclassman Keith Evans, thinking of the three years when they, too, will be Seniors.
Sophomores salute Central’s Centennial

Now a full-fledged Centralite, the sophomore finds new experiences awaiting him and what seemed like an eternity behind him. With the coming of test tubes, American Literature, theorems and advanced languages, he realizes the burdens of a vigorous curriculum. To counterbalance this he dreams of the time when, as an upperclassman, he will be the center of attention in Color Day, host of the Junior-Senior Prom, and a star at graduation.

With Color Day and the Prom still in the hazy future, he faces the present and its realities. He finds that the year demands more of his time and more of himself: ROTC, Pep Squad, varsity sports, and the essential Christmas clothes drive add to his ever increasing maturity and his ability to face Central’s demands on the upperclassman.

In spite of his busy schedule, Mr. Stinson is available to advise and counsel Sophomores on problems and schedules.

Sophomore enthusiasm and support for the team is rewarded by winning the spirit jug.
Juniors work toward successful year

Mr. Robert Moran, the junior counselor, works on many activities and helps juniors plan for their Senior year.

Enthusiastic '67 squaws and braves plan for an exciting and successful year. Studies become more challenging as U.S. History, English 11, Algebra II, and Chemistry I enter the schedule.

First the frenzy of Color Day, which is organized and conducted by the Junior Class, invades Central. Pom poms, ribbons, hats, and class pins are purchased by students with bubbling school spirit.

Able leaders must be elected from the Junior Class to carry on the fine work of our Student Council. Campaigns are carried out to help the voting students make a wise choice. Skits, speeches, banners, and "pass-outs" make the election more authentic.

In the spring the Prom climaxes a year of hard work and memorable experiences. The money from Color Day and ribbon sales helps finance this formal dance.

The juniors have begun to strive for goals which will enable them to play progressive roles in life.

During lunch time, Juniors have a chance to relax (?) and discuss school activities.
Juniors enjoy their five-minute break as they rush to class through crowded halls.

Seniors conclude chapter full of memories

Miss Hash, counselor for the Senior class since the Freshman year, ponders over files to see if all will graduate.

During the Senior year, the student may carry the toughest course load of his four years. Upon conclusion of this busy year, the Seniors participate in impressive graduation ceremonies. With varying degrees of reluctance, they then depart leaving a gap which is filled by another class.

Although it has been a long four years, the Seniors will remember this period as one of the most wonderful of their lives. As a Senior, then, the Centralite has thoughts of the past, frustrations of the present, and a degree of bewilderment in facing the future.

Miss Spangeberg, one of the two Senior Counselors, helps interested Seniors find an appropriate college to attend.

June 2, 1966

Dear Central

Upon this occasion of our graduation, we want to express our appreciation for the many wonderful memories you have given us. In our years here you have taught us not only lessons from books, but also those from the hearts of your students.

You have guided us through four of the most important years of our life. You have shown us your halls, your classrooms, your activities, your people. The year is over. The Class of '66 will never again function as a unit.

The year is gone. Memories remain—treasured moments—the Football Homecoming, the Senior Variety Show, the Christmas Dance, Senior Award Day, the Prom, Graduation.

And now, though we find ourselves in confusion about our future, we hope we have not failed to learn your true lessons. We leave you now, after four years, more complete individuals, more able to face the realities of the world.

Very gratefully

The Centennial Class of '66
