How dare you mix and match? Combine social and learning? Live life and have fun? It is not acceptable, agent, to stray from the academic world, and insert your outside world into this one. This world of brick walls and waxed hallways is for seriousness, agent, leave your sillyness at home. Keep your jokes and opinions, your passions and loves, your life separate. Those are not for here. It would never work to combine living and school. Okay, agent, you want to try it? Then I dare you, bring your outside life in. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to be a student, but live. Make high school memorable, live your LIFE with STYLE. Your choice agent, accept the challenge or erase the chance to live.

This message will self destruct in 5...4...3...2...

In a world where sports and academics are the main focus of most students, many people and things get overlooked. Rarely does anyone notice the group of boys who play Yugi-Oh by the first floor elevator before school everyday, or the group of students who pray around the flagpole every morning at seven.

A group of around eight boys gather just about every morning to play a highly competitive card game called Yugi-Oh, they call themselves “The Duel Group,” said Junior Brian Aspel.

Students in the morning also gather around the flagpole to pray. Anyone who wants to could attend.

These groups just show the outstanding groups at our school that maybe aren’t sponsored, but they are still worthwhile to have, and that make kids want to come to school.

MONEY, MONEY, MONEY...

"I used to work all the time and it was just too much. With cheerleading, homework and work, I never saw my friends or family."

-Senior, Abbey Sale

School, homework, family, friends, and work? Many Central students found themselves stretched to the limit during the week, and all for a little bit of money. But what are students doing with it and how are they getting it?

"I work about 15 hours a week at 54th Street being a hostess" said senior, Courtney Frittz. "I save most of my money but sometimes I splurge on clothes or something."

Some however, work to spend. "I used to work all the time and it was just too much. With cheerleading, homework, and work I never saw my friends or family" said senior Abbey Sale. Now I only work 4 hours a week so my money goes to gas and other things I need to buy, there's not much left for saving."

While some spent, others were left begging.

"I'm involved in poms, SADD, spanish club, freshman mentor program, and interact club" said senior Hannah Strasser, "with all that and homework its practically impossible to balance a job in with it. Most of the time, if I want to do something I have to ask my parents for money."

No matter the case, students found themselves busy and looking for a way to do it all and have the money to do it.
What students do with their money:

“I use my money to pay for gas for my car and buy things that I really want.”
-Senior, Andy Gibson

“I spend my money buying things like clothes and whenever I go out to eat.”
-Sophomore, Kelsey Jones.

“All the money I make goes towards paying my bills, thats why I work all the time.”

Crud Wars

Camp was the most life-changing week of my life
-Senior Emily Unzicker

Young Lifers just spending some time together after campaigner

Abbi Cator, Beth Madlin, Jean Jackson, and Sarah Campbell take in the last moments at summer camp.
Young Life is a place where you can hang out with your friends, meet new people, and just be yourself.

"I come to Young Life to meet new people and learn more about God," said freshman Lauren VanCleave.

"I have made Young Life a priority for the past two years of my high school career," said junior Corey Ripper. "I start my week off by looking forward to Young Life club."

Fifty-three years ago Monty Burnham started the first Young Life club at Central. Burnham and thirty-five of his friends went to summer camp and that next fall he started club. At club kids hang out, sing songs, play games, talk about God, and just have a good time.

"Club is a place where I can go and just let loose, everyone there is fun to be around and accepts me for who I am," said junior Corey Ripper.

"Coming to club gives me the chance to hang out with kids my age in a Christian atmosphere." said senior Emily Unzicker.

Young Life started with an annual event called "Crud Wars". This is an all area club where students from all area high schools interact.

"On curd war night everyone wears their rugged clothes knowing they will be darting from water balloons, flour cups, handfuls of condiments, and chicken feed said junior Ripper Don’t Plan on staying clean”

Kids were split into teams and competed against each other. Many were covered in flour, mustard, syrup, and chicken feed. At the end a fire truck came and washed everyone off.

"I was glad when the fire truck came and sprayed us off, or I am pretty sure my car would still smell of chicken feed" said senior Unzicker.

This event is only the start of what Young Life is all about. Young Life gives people the chance to experience things they have never experienced before. “Camp was the most life changing and the greatest experience of my life” said Junior Corey Ripper.
1. Tsuki Wang sleeps in the gym. He used the early morning as a chance to recover from the weekend.
2. David Volpe spends this time to read the newspaper. It was a chance to relax for many students.
3. Andrea Greeney spends her time reading. It was an opportunity to catch up on a good book.

1. Ian Hall works diligently to catch up on homework. It was the perfect time to double check that everything was finished.
2. Casey Shaffer composes numbers on her calculator. She managed to get homework finished on Monday morning.
3. Chelsea Tyler and Hannah Hard visit in the gym. It was a good chance to socialize.
This year at Central there was a new and, at times annoying addition to the Central Schedule: Collaboration Monday.

The “collaboration’s” purpose, according to Head Principal Marlie Williams is “time embedded into the school day for teachers to discuss data, examine student work, and perfect instructional design, it’s also a time for our faculty to reflect as teachers.”

The meetings took the place of seminar, every other Monday throughout the year, however the meetings were held first thing in the morning instead of the regularly scheduled time of 10:41.

“I think students should get to sleep instead of coming to school to just sit and not do anything” said, junior Joe Moore. This thought seemed to be on every student’s mind.

Why couldn’t we just come to school at 8:20, when the meeting was over?

“Our bosses downtown are mandating students be present, Collaboration is not yet a perfect science,” said Williams when asked about this issue.

Though the administration believed that Collaboration Monday served a significant role in improving the performance and effectiveness of Central’s educators, the purpose was not all that clear to many students.

“I don’t really see the point... seminar is just as easy but it does give me a chance to make sure all my homework is done,” said sophomore Katelyn Sprague.

1. Amanda Hix and Sarah Weisser visit in the gym. Many students took this time to catch up with friends.
2. Students lounge in the gym Monday morning. Juniors and seniors were allowed to hang out in the gym and cafeteria during Collaboration Mondays.
3. Brittany Shahrop sits deep in thought in the cafeteria. Many students had nothing to do on Monday morning.
4. Oscar Martin, Dakota Cloud, and Brandy Mitchell rush to finish their homework. Many students used the time to catch up on studies.
5. Senior Rob Schaff works diligently on his homework in the midst of the crowded senior cafeteria during Collaboration Monday.

1. Lindsey Rasmussen finishes homework. Some students put homework off to the last minute.
2. Aaron Nadel sits lost in his own thoughts. He spent the morning recovering from the weekend.
3. K. Johnson examines his homework. He tried to finish the assignment before class.
4. David Vondel and Ted Miller visit. Many students took the opportunity to catch up with friends.
Undercover Couple

High school relationships have their problems, but when you're not actually allowed to date, things can get sticky. For freshman "Carmen San Diego and sophomore "James Bond, the pressure of sneaking around behind their parents' backs added to the burden.

"My parents won't let me date, because my mom didn't get to date until she was 16. My dad says he knows how teenage guys really are," said San Diego.

The couple found out that sometimes you've just got to bend the rules a little.

"I'm only allowed to go on group dates, nothing one-on-one. Most of the time we would leave with a group of friends to go to a movie, but end up sitting together away from the rest of the group."

The pressure wasn't just on San Diego though. Her boyfriend, Bond, was feeling the heat as well.

"Carmen's dad really didn't like me at first, but I don't think he minds me as much anymore," said Bond.

The couple has been dating for a couple of months now, and luckily things are getting easier. Maybe we can all learn a little something from Carmen and James.

Tips for Gifts

1. What’s the occasion?
   It’s never a good idea to give “Christmas card for a birthday.”
   Hopefully it shouldn’t take too long to pick up a more appropriate card.

2. “Oooh gee, um thanks”
   Make sure you know the person well enough when you go to buy a gift.
   Giving someone a “pair of earrings when they don’t have pierced ears” is never a good idea. Let’s hope you never have to hear this pitiful excuse for a thank you.

3. Money, money, money
   Don’t go too cheap. Getting a “wax rose from a bowling alley on Valentine’s Day” will never be impressive.

4. Beware of the homemade
   Homemade gifts come from the heart. The really let someone know you put time and effort into it. Be sure to double check that your creation is up to par before giving it though. “One time my girlfriend gave me a CD for my birthday.
   When I went to listen to it, it wouldn’t play because there weren’t any songs even on it.”
Walking into school on a Friday morning students unexpectedly come upon the band playing the fight song and the cheerleaders marching along through the halls. This was just a good taste of Central’s school spirit.

“I like to see everyone supporting our school,” said senior Justin Bigham.

Not only was school spirit in the halls but on Friday night at the football games. The stands were full of blue and white. Standing in front of the student section you saw the craziest of them all. Many senior and junior boys supported the football team by painting their chests. What made them so crazy?

“I live and die with the team. My emotions are just as high as theirs and nothing is more important than those guys out there on that football field,” said junior Landinn Ekhart.

Other students were proud of how much school spirit has increased since last season. Central started out on a good note for representing the blue and white. What’s up next for Central?
1. Boys got excited for the season. Many guys were known for going all out during the football games.

2. The cheerleaders often gave their pom poms to the crowd. The pom poms gave the students added spirit.

3. Sophomores got ready for the games. The junior classmen played a part in our school spirit.

4. Cheering for our football team was a normal thing every game. Our spirit boosted the mood at the football games.

Left: A big group of girls raise their pom poms to cheer for the Boys. Music played along loudly to support the team.
Central Students find companionship in animals other than dogs.

Sonic the hedgehog is not only a video game character; Sonic was senior Jill Green’s albino hedgehog.

“My brother gave it to me to take care of because he replaced it with two dogs” said Jill.

Taking care of a hedgehog is just as easy as any pet.

“We feed it cat food and it drinks water. It is really easy to take care of” said Green.

Jill’s hedgehog lived in a normal pet cage with a wood chip bedding. He was very active at night and throws his wood chips around. During the day he was shy.

“He hides under my arm when other people are around” said Green.

Sonic also got nervous in front of an audience.

“It puffs up when it gets nervous and it wrinkles his forehead to cover his face” said Jill. Sonic wasn’t just your blue hedgehog stuck in the TV screen, he is also a white albino exotic pet.
What's your exotic pet?

Tensions were high in the halls of Central High School in the weeks leading up to November 7, 2006. That date was especially important because it was the day of the general elections nationwide. Seniors seemed to be getting in on the action moreso than they had before because of the fact that over half of them would get to vote for the very first time.

This election had many controversial issues on the ballot among them were the issues of a use tax on tobacco and an amendment that would legalize stem cell research.

"I do not support candidates only because of their party affiliation I support candidates because of their morals and their ability to fulfill their office" said senior Steve Wichern.

Although many students were not able to vote in the election many still recognized the importance of being active in politics. Students volunteered their time by monitoring polls and attending rallies to gain support and raise awareness about issues that are important to them.

"Even though I am not old enough to vote in this election I still think it is very important to be aware of what is going on in regards to politics because it will still effect my life" said senior Meg Adams.

This election started a buzz throughout the school that will continue to effect the lives of our students for years to come.

Did You Know

The voter turnout for this election was so high that several voting locations ran out of ballots and had to go to other locations to get more.
Amendment 2: Passed with 51.2% of voters voting Yes
Amendment 3: Failed with 51.5% of voters voting No
Proposition B: Passed with 75.9% of voters voting Yes
State Senate: Charlie Shields was elected with 60% of voters voting for his reelection.
US Senate: Claire McCaskill was elected with 45.9% of voters voting for her

Although they were not old enough to vote in the November election, seniors Steve Wichern and Meg Adams still felt it was important to be informed about the issues on the ballot.

1. The junior crowd watches the Penny Drive games. In order to raise more money, students either paid a dollar or bought a T-shirt to view the games.

2. NHS members pick up balls from the balance beam games. Members worked to collect money all week with the help of student council.

3. NHS members watch the dance off take place. Members had to do a lot in order to prepare for the assembly.

4. The new penny drive T-shirt design. The color was chosen as the freshman class color to up freshman participation.

5. Kaitlyn Spencer test out the balance beam. This was an assembly favorite.

6. Sophomore Kaitlyn Spencer and Junior Jeff Smith face off on the balance beam. Participants tried to knock others off with noodles.

7. Coach Kimble smiles with excitement while preparing for the games to begin. Kimble and Coach French won the basketball shootout.

8. Yudh Tewari quickly reapplies his shoe. Participants had to turn ten times before feeling for their shoes.

9. A penny drive participant feels his shoe in the class pile. Each participant was helped down the court by an NHS member for safety.

10. NHS member, Adam Hirst and sponsor, Becky Callaway, discuss announcements. Hirst was MC for the penny drive.

11. All dance off participants wait for the music to start. One member from each class was chosen for the event.

12. Senior participants cheer on other classes. All games were competitive, but in the end it was about raising the money.

13. Sophomore Jess Jackson dances as her class representative. Jackson was a returning dance-off member from last year.

14. Senior game members cheer on fellow teammates. Seniors raised the most money for the penny drive.

15. Players listen to instructions about the balance beam event. Teams assisted their player by throwing balls at the opponent.

16. NHS member, Brant Shields, addresses the student body. Central High school had raised the most money in its history.

17. Coach Kimble is fed the ball by Colby Snyder. Kimble represented the teachers in the basketball shootout along with Coach French.
Every year, more has been asked of Central High School from United way than the year before. This year proved to be no different. “This year, the goal was to raise at least $5,000 since last year they raised $5,000” said Nisha Sheth, National Honor Society President.

Nation Honor Society and Student Council teamed up in hopes of reaching the new sky high goal. Together, they decided that new approaches should be taken in contrast to the previous years.

“We decided to make the T-shirts the freshman class color to raise more money and up freshman participation. We also raffled off senior football jerseys, parking passes, and tickets to the dance, game and $20 at the concession stand” said Rachael Cochran, Co-committee leader.

Half the money was raised with the T-shirt sales but when it came down to the final days of the drive, there were doubts about being able to reach such a momentous goal.

“We were a little worried that we were going to fall short of our goal and let United Way down” said Sheth.

At the end of the assembly, NHS member, Brant Shields stood in front of the student body and announced that Central had raised the largest amount in the schools history. Checks were distributed to Salvation Army and Interserve, which together totaled over $11,000. Which left even higher standards for the years to follow.
Going shopping is an addiction that can’t be fixed. Junior Ali Colboch was addicted to clothes and going shopping this year.

“I go shopping at least once a week,” said Colboch.

When choosing an outfit for the day, Colboch went off of one color, and centered her daily clothes and accessories on that one color.

“It’s easiest to go off of a color, or just go by the weather,” said Colboch.

The price for an outfit for Colboch was usually around forty dollars, but the most she has spent on one whole outfit was one hundred dollars.

“Usually everything I buy is on sale, but sometimes I go a little shopping crazy.”

Shopping was something that could be seen as both fun and expensive, but it all depended on how you view it.

When you think of fast food, do you think of buying it more than three times a week?

Junior Kyle Giddens went to buy fast food at least four times a week. He also went to Dunkin’ Donuts every morning before school.

“I get fast food so often because it’s cheap and easy,” Giddens said.

Giddens also said that on average he spent forty dollars a week on fast food. This makes his addiction not very cheap.

Fast food is an addiction that is cheap, easy, and great tasting.
Most people have to have their morning coffee, and Mrs. Larson's fourth hour leadership class was an example of that.

Every day during fourth hour in Mrs. Larson's room, coffee was brewing. Seniors Nick Bracciano and Meg Adams made the coffee as soon as they would step into the room.

"I make the coffee because everyone wants it, but mainly because Kallie Hartigan makes me," said Meg Adams.

Four out of ten people that were in the class said that they drank the coffee because they said that it would soothe them. The other six people said that it gave them energy.

Coffee is an addiction that can soothe you or energize you.

MOMENTS

SENIOR AARON HORMAN’S LIFE-CHANGING MOMENT

EDITOR: Tori Zieger

We spied with our little eyes a cell phone, a new driver’s license the now-interesting opposite sex, the replacement of spelling tests with algebra tests. We spied adolescence and teenage years. Then we looked closer and spied hospital bills, get well soon cards, a waiting room filled with friends and family, a blur of doctors who ran in and out of the hospital room. We spied what teenagers never wanted to spy. The possibility of mortality.

Every year in school, students are taught to look for life changing events, signs that the future has arrived, that the growing up process has been initiated. Youth prevented notions of “life changing” to be as drastic as emergency brain surgery. Senior Aaron Horman was 13 when his life changing moment occurred. He attended a conference in Kansas City, when, while he waited for his ride, he experienced a massive headache and went to lie down.

“After I had laid down for awhile and the headache hadn’t lessened any, I got up to find a nurse, but something happened and I went unconscious and fell down the bleachers,” said Aaron.

When Aaron came to, he was in ICU.

“A blood vessel had burst in my brain and hemorrhaged. There was also a blood clot the size of a grown woman’s fist pushing against my brain.

After spending two weeks in the hospital, Aaron then had to start rehab for speech and motor skills; he couldn’t move the left side of his body.

“I spent two and a half months in rehab relearning everything I learned as a child. Today, I am partially blind and I can’t play any contact sports.”

Aaron’s life changing moment occurred in a much different way than anyone had planned. We’ve always lived with knowledge of mortality as teenagers, but it takes one moment for the knowledge to become realized.
Imagine traveling to a new country. Now imagine taking that journey senior year of high school. Well that’s exactly what 4 German, 1 Swedish, and 1 Danish student did. Though they are faced with a new culture, they are very excited about the experience.

“I like it here; we all do. There’s a lot of school spirit here. Back at home, we don’t have that,” Dominique said. “There weren’t many school sports, so homecoming was special because we don’t have that.”

Along with the new idea of school spirit, there are new people to meet.

“The people here are so cool,” Tolga said. “They come to me. In Germany, the people there are a lot colder. They don’t talk much. You just go to school to learn; no sports, no school spirit, no cheerleaders.”

Ephrain agreed, “Pretty much what Tolga says is exactly how my school is, too.”

Unlike Central, the exchange students stay in the same classroom all day.

“Here at Central, students move, not teachers. For 10 years I have been in a class with the same people, and I’m with them all day. You get to know them really well. Here, it’s hard in the beginning to get to know people. You just go over to people and say ‘hey,’” Lin said.

Compared to Central, schools in Germany are much smaller.

“It’s three times bigger than my school in Germany. We do have school sports, but not so much school spirit. Some students go to sports events, but not all,” Tommy said.

In Sweden, the size is much larger.

“We have about 1,200 students, but our school is much bigger than Central. We do have a cafeteria, though,” Phillip said.

Though the students come from different places, they all share a bond. Much of their time is spent together, whether it’s classes, choir, soccer, or seminar time, the group remains close.

“We are together a lot. We are like one big family,” Dominique said.

Who Do You Look like?

By: SENIOR STAFF-Megan Bailey and JUNIOR STAFF- Stephanie Dobyen
Central Students Find Twins in Celebrities

They say that everywhere in the world someone has a twin. In the halls of Central High School, familiar faces are always noticed.

“I like it; I like her; she is a good actress,” said senior Kara Davison on looking like Alexis Bledel.

Some may find it as a compliment and others may have never heard that they look like someone famous.

“I’ve never heard that, I don’t know, I guess we have the same hair color. Sort of, maybe,” said sophomore Seanna Daise about resembling Katie Holmes.

“I didn’t think about it until the students told me,” said Mr. Ashley on looking like Mathew McConaughey. “It’s definitively a compliment.”

“I think if I had longer hair I definitely would resemble him,” said senior Colby Smith on having the appearance of the guy on Facebook.

Next time you walk the halls of Central, see if you can find your twin!

It's like they always say, it's better to be lucky than good. For a couple of Central seniors, this saying was never more true than when they were searching for colleges, or better put, not searching for colleges.

"It was one of those things where it just kind of fell right into my lap," said senior Nick Bracciano. While in San Francisco for a medical forum, Bracciano heard about a bus taking students who wanted to go to the University of California-Berkeley for a visit.

Not only was it, according to Bracciano, a "really nice campus," but the climate seemed to fit him perfectly.

"It never really gets too hot. It just seems like the perfect temperature."

Similar to Bracciano's experience, senior Brenda Steeby stumbled onto an out-of-state school that just seemed to fit.

"It's at the base of a mountain. It's beautiful," says Steeby. Steeby was visiting her sister in Utah when she decided to visit BYU.

Despite these two senior's choices, many seniors are finding colleges in state to attend. "I've pretty much been set on MU for a couple years now. I like the campus, and it's about the perfect distance away from home." Senior Brett Christie says.

So whether students are finding colleges in Missouri or California, Kansas or New York, one thing remains a necessity: find a place you can see calling home for the next four years. If it doesn't feel right, it probably isn't.
Juan in a million ESL student adapts to new life at Central.

Sanchos listens while Mrs. Wampler teaches the ESL class. He found that even though he can speak English, he still struggles with the language.

Congo are just one of the instruments Sanchos plays by hand. He chose to play percussion because there were a variety of instruments to be played.

Walking through the halls, Sanchos gets frustrated when people can't understand him. Learning the language was one of the struggles he faced coming to America.

Sanchos beats on his bass drum during marching band. Band was one of the new things Sanchos decided to try when he came to Central.

Walking by room 19 you will see a room of people who are very different from the average student. This difference: the language of English. Of these diverse students, Freshman Juan Sanchez is one that stands out. After being in the U.S. for over a year, Juan has learned English very quickly.

"Last year was hard, but I was excited to speak English," Sanchez said. "This year is easier."

After moving here from Michoacan, Mexico on a five-year resident card, Central is much different from his school in Mexico. "Classrooms are different here," Sanchez explained. "In Mexico, teachers move to the different classes. We don’t have lockers, and we have to carry our things."

Living here has its similarities and differences, when it comes to school activities.

"I’m on the swim team like I was in Mexico," Sanchez said. "I am also in marching band."

Even though Sanchez has learned English, he still struggles with it.

"In ESL the teacher explains what things mean that we don’t know. It’s easier because there are more Spanish speaking people, that way I can talk. The first days were hard. I have no friends that speak English. I can’t talk to people because it’s hard when people try to understand me. I get frustrated," Sanchez explained as he clenched his fists.

Though he enjoys his new life and opportunities he misses his home and friends back in Mexico.

"I do miss them, but I am going back for vacation," Sanchez said. There are more opportunities, going to high school here. I’m still learning and someday I’m going to speak like everyone else. Well, I think."
Everything has a place... or does it?

BETWEEN. SENIOR David Voltz thumb through papers to find an assignment. All through the year Voltz tried to get organized, but it didn’t work for him.

LEFT. Voltz poses with his book bag. He used the same messy bag throughout the year.

ABOVE. Voltz bag which is often compared to the aftermath of a natural disaster. He never had a place for anything but threw everything into there.

RIGHT. JUNIOR Meredith Tipler’s nearly organized bag amazes her. Unlike David she always kept her bag very organized.
Organization - it takes time, energy, and a slight case of obsessive compulsive disorder. Junior Meredith Triplet was a very organized student at Central this year. "Everything has its own place," said Triplet. She felt it was necessary to be organized and write down all assignments in her agenda because it made it easier for her to turn in her homework on time. Meredith also chose to stay organized so she could find everything quickly. "I have a folder for every class," said Triplet "and each folder is organized the same way."

On the other hand, senior David Voltz considered organization to be a waste of his time. Instead of a perfectly organized bag, David's bag was a mess of random papers.

David's philosophy this year at Central was "if I throw it in my book bag then I know later that it has got to be in there!"

Whether you identify more with Meredith or David, everyone has a unique style of organization.
Central students reveal their most outrageous excuses

You’ve finally gotten away with it. You just made your 1:00 curfew 1:15 without being caught. Right when you think you’ve slipped past your mom, the lights flip on. BUSTED. Of course you’re blurring out ridiculous excuses— all of which your gullible mother seems to believe. At the same time, she might be letting you off easy. “I lost my keys” or “My car wouldn’t start” are classics for Central students.

That’s my Story
And I’m Stickin’ to it

When the late football players show up for morning practice, all Coach Woolard can do is shake his head. He knows exactly what is coming. “As coaches we hear the worst excuses... One kid showed up late to two-a-day practice and his excuse was that he was in St. Louis for a wedding that morning— even though it was only ten o’clock,” said Woolard.
What's Your Story?

Teens are on top of their game when it comes to making up embellished excuses. Owen Lenander has become infamous for his ways of getting out of trouble. "I got home two hours late one night and when I got inside my mom asked me where I had been. I told her I was home on time, but had fallen asleep in my car in the driveway for two hours," said Lenander.

What's Your Alibi?

As Central’s resident police officer, Officer Ogdahl is prone to hearing some of the most exaggerated excuses around. Even though he’s heard just about every alibi in the book, some still cease to amaze him. At one point, "a girl was walking in the hall and I asked her why she was out of class. She said she was looking for her purse even though she had it on her. When I asked her if she had found it yet she said no," said Ogdahl.
Most summers spent by Central students consist of working daily jobs, going on vacations to the beach and hanging out with friends.

Other students like seniors Tori Carvell and Caysee Bellman had different plans for their summers. They both went on Mission trips with their churches.

“A mission trip is a way of serving God and spreading the word of Christ by helping others,” said Senior Caysee Bellman.

Spending many days last summer in foreign countries, Carvell and Bellman gave their time to others. As Bellman crossed the Mexican border, Carvell traveled east to Africa. Both group served others in different countries.

“On our Mission trip we put drip irrigation systems in five orphanages in Africa,” said Senior Tori Carvell.

“For our Mission trip we passed out shoe boxes full of stuffed animals and children in Mexico,” said Bellman.

Getting a chance to travel to a foreign country is an unforgettable experience. The missionaries learn a lot about the United States by viewing other countries and the way they live.

“Going on a mission trip, you learn about a culture that is so different than your own and you’re able to see first hand how blessed we all are to have been born in America. Mission trips make you grateful for what you have. As well as strengthening your faith,” said Bellman.

While some Central students relaxed out in the sun this summer, sitting by the pool, students involved in Mission trips were helping change others lives.

In today's society, people are more reliant on fast food restaurant service. Americans would rather visit a drive-thru than prepare a homemade meal. However, some students such as senior Jaden Lantz and junior Ari Domingo still eat healthy.

"Eating healthy is very important to me because it effects the way I perform in running," Lantz said.

"I usually eat home-made meals prepared by my mom and I don't eat school meals except on Fridays when there are veggie burgers," said Domingo. "I have been a vegetarian all my life."

A healthy diet is followed by exercise.

"I started running in 7th grade with cross country, but I have exercised all my life. I was active in track and basketball in elementary school and I've danced since I was two years old," said Lantz.

Living a healthy life is always important whether it is eating healthy or exercising.

WE'VE GOT SPIRIT...
What do spandex, Quill Man, and blue paint have to do with Central? October 2nd was the start of Harvest Homecoming this year, which had more student involvement than many years past.

“It felt like the whole school was participating, and it made it even more fun,” said senior Steve Wichern.

Spirit could be seen hanging in every hallway and exploding from every classroom.

“I loved the spirit days! It was so much fun getting to dress up and just be crazy,” said freshman Sidney Chleborad.

Students were very creative with 80’s Monday, Character Tuesday, Dress Up Wednesday, Class Color Thursday, and Blue/White Friday.

“Brendan Donaldson’s mullet was probably my favorite part of the entire week,” senior Maggie Kamen said.

The student body was even surprised, by the administration, when they were dismissed from class to the football field for an outside pep assembly.

“The pep assembly was by far my favorite part. It was so much fun having it outside, and I really enjoyed the skit,” said junior Kaitlyn Pinzino.

Homecoming week is a time to be crazy and just let loose. This year’s Harvest Homecoming was a great example of just how much Central spirit there is.

Students Find a Variety of Activities to do on the Weekend

SENIOR STAFF: Annie Barry

School, homework, and practices are a few similarities most students at Central share during the week. However, Friday at 2:42, everyone goes their separate ways. Some students make their way to the football games while others choose to stay home and be with friends.

"On Friday nights, I go to the home football games and dance at half time with the poms," said sophomore Kenz Patterson. "After the game, I go with my friends to Sonic then to one of our houses to watch a movie."

Patterson’s weekend life is completely different than juniors’, Casey Colgan and Quinn Reeder, both band members of Mister Sinister.

“We hang out and play board games like Monopoly and Yahtzee on the weekends that we don’t have shows,” said Colgan.

“Most of our shows are in Kansas City, Lawrence, or here,” said Reeder, “but I am always with my friends.”

Fridays and Saturdays vary for many students, however Sundays are a different story. On Sundays, most students relax and take a break before the week begins again. “Sundays are family day,” said Patterson.

Many students mellow down and prepare for their week ahead, looking forward for Friday at 2:42.

A NEW HAUNTED HOUSE COMES TO ST. JOSEPH

JUNIOR STAFF- Colbey Ricklefs

Banshee screams, banging pots, and chain saws. These were heard coming from the woods at the Haunted Drive-In.

"I was nervous but excited," explained freshman Charles Hinde. Hinde attended the Drive-In in its first year in St. Joseph. "I could hear the screeching in the woods."

Once enough courage was mustered and the fee was paid, the adventure soon followed.

"There is only one thing," snickered the disturbed-looking guide. "Don’t touch anyone, and they probably won’t touch you!"

A guide lead small groups through the candlelit trail. Once the candles stopped, one would find themself in a pitch black forest. It was there the scares began:

"The people stared at you," remembered Hinde. "And they didn’t laugh, you tried to make them laugh."

Senior Sandi Shores had a contrasting opinion. "It wasn’t really all that scary," shrugged Shores. "I’ve worked in a Haunted House before, so I already knew everything they were doing."

Shores’ time was not entirely anticlimactic. "My friend Hailee Stover got freaked out by the chain saw," laughed Shores. "She pushed another girl down, grabbed me, and started running."

Although Hinde and Shores had different opinions on the Drive-In, they both agreed on one thing: they would be back next year.

Senior Keith Swing steps away from every day sports and excels in competitive weight lifting

The crowd has never been so loud, so intense, so focused on one person. They watched as he lifted the bar from the floor to his shoulders, to over his head. They cheered as the referee gave two white lights, the sign that it was deemed a good lift. They roared in unison as they realized that he did it: with his sixth lift he outlifted his competitor and won his age division.

Senior Keith Swing has been a competitive weightlifter for eight years, after he started lifting in the fourth grade as a social pastime.

"I began weightlifting because my friends were doing it," said Swing. "The more I lifted, though, the more I liked it. I liked the competition, training to get better, winning, and getting to travel as I got better. It became more than just a past time, it became a passion."

Each competition brought Keith to a different part of the country, a couple times even outside of it. "I've been all around the United States, literally, to some places in Canada, and recently to Ecuador."

"Despite my extensive traveling experiences," said Swing, "my favorite moment of my lifting career is still from the end of my freshman year. I went to a competition in Vineland, New Jersey and took first at my school age level and won best lifter for the 15 and under age group. It didn't hurt that it was nationals."

In competitions, the lifters competed against each other in the "snatch" and the "cling and jerk" lifts. "The 'snatch' lift is where you lift the weight straight from the floor to overhead in one movement. The 'cling and jerk' lift is where the weight is lifted from the floor to the shoulders, then from the shoulders to overhead. I lift 120 kilos in the snatch and 155 kilos in the cling and jerk," said Swing.

Keith made long and hard improvements from his beginnings as a fourth grade social lifter, and is something to be taken seriously. "It's what I'm known for now, it's cool."
While friends may come and go, siblings are permanent. It’s a love or hate relationship. For the seniors, freshmen siblings created a huge difference at school. “I’m not used to seeing someone I live with in the hallways, especially since we haven’t been together since grade school,” said senior Jameca Eddy.

Jameca’s freshmen brother, Brandon Eddy thinks it’s better from middle school now that he’s at school with his older sister. “I get to see her a lot more and say hi to her in the hallways.”

“Sometimes I see my sister in the hallways and she is wearing my clothes, it makes me mad,” said senior Megan Brady. Another senior at Central, Kaitlyn Roberts likes having a sibling at school. “I actually like it better now that I’m at the same school as my sister,” said senior Kaitlyn Roberts. “I don’t have to drive to Bode every morning to drop her off. It’s cool to be in school with her one last year before I go to college.”

At Central High School through the 2006-2007 school year there were 48 sets of freshmen senior siblings. These siblings hadn’t been together since grade school and many of the seniors are happy they get to be with their siblings one last time.

A crowd of students, teachers, and parents poured into the auditorium with the same question running through their mind, “Who will be crowned the next Mr. CHS?”

“This was the second annual Mr. CHS pageant with twenty male contestants from different clubs and sports”, said senior Brittany Davison. “Each guy is different and anyone could have won, it was up to the judges and what they were looking for in the next Mr. CHS,” said senior Kara Davidson.

When asking a few members of the audiences what they were looking for in their Mr. CHS, the answers came in a wide variety. “For me Mr. CHS must be good looking and have sweet dance moves,” said senior Jeremy Worth.

For juniors Tolgo Yagci and Taylor Cebulko, they both agreed that, “he has to be good looking, be able to lip sing, and be funny all at the same time.”

With the guys wanting Mr. CHS to be good looking, the girls were looking beyond that, they wanted something a little more than looks. “He has to have a lot of school spirit, be brave, and show off his true colors,” said sophomores Mikka Elo and Lindsey Pearson.

At the end of the night when the scores were added up, the winner of the crown went to Mr. Spanish Club, senior Brett Christie. “I wasn’t expecting to win, but I want to thank all of my friends for their help and to the spanish club”, said Christie.
1. Senior Brett Faller won ribbon dance in Mr. CHS as part of his lip-syncing routine. He was National Honor Society co-captain.

How dare you release your competitive spirit? Put on your uniform and desire to win? Walk out on the field and feel empowered? It is not acceptable, agent, to challenge yourself physically, emotionally, mentally. This world of calm serenity is not made for your tide of emotions, agent, so leave your joy of winning and bitter sorrow of defeat elsewhere. Keep your talent and skills, your motivations and team spirit, your game at home. Those are not for here. It would never work to play games and stay serious. Okay agent, you want to try it? Prove me wrong, show me your game face. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to be a competitor and push yourself to your limit. Experience the adrenaline rush, the cheers of the fans, feel your heat pounding, watch the look on your teammates faces; experience ATHLETICS. Your choice agent, accept the challenge or lose the chance to feel the touch of greatness.

BOYS SWIMMING BECOMES A FALL SPORT

Twelve Boys, Two Managers, One coach; that’s all it took to get the job done. The boys swim team worked together to cheer each other on and to win their meets.

“Swimming is a very tough sport and takes a lot of hard work; it utilizes every part of your body” said Ari Domingo.

Ari was a third year swimmer, and had a tough choice to make at the beginning of the year: Domingo had to choose between swimming and football.

“I did not choose swimming over football I just took a break from football” said Domingo.

“I felt that the swim team needed me to help their team be a whole” said Domingo as this was his last year as a swimmer. He claimed that next year he will be playing football.

During the season the boys looked forward to getting into shape, setting goals, and making it to state. To achieve goals they gave 100%, worked hard at every practice, and tried hard to win every meet. For preparation of the meets the team would gather at each other’s houses and have pasta dinners.

“I enjoyed the pasta dinners it was good team unity and prepared us for our meets,” said Domingo.

Sad to see his swimming career end, Domingo had a great time working hard to do his best for the swim team!

Boy's Soccer Team Comes Together

One of the toughest problems a coach is faced with is how to get a group of individuals to come together and function as a team. Attempts ranged from team dinners, to lock-ins to leadership activities, in hopes of gaining a solid, more unified team on the field.

But soccer stood alone, not only taking part in the traditional activities, but going beyond; using team building as an opportunity to give back to the community.

Central's soccer team volunteered every Friday for three weeks at Neely Elementary School, playing games with the students.

The chance to be with under-privileged children helped bring the team together. "Learning to help little kids helped bring the team together by learning to help ourselves in practice, in the game, and in life," said senior co-captain, Dean Mausolf.

The team faced a rough season, but they managed to look beyond that and focus on the good they were doing in the community. "It was a good experience for our team. It brought us together and gave us an opportunity to help out and hopefully change some little kids' lives" said senior Brett Christie.

Robert Schaaf’s best time is at State

Throughout cross country many things went differently than years in the past. The past years always had more than one person going to the States meet except this year only Robert Schaaf got the chance to race. “Robert attacked the race with skill, planning, and tenacity. He had a strategy that involved patience, determination, and confidence” said Coach Roger Price. Schaaf finished 19th at the state race with a time of 17:24 which was a personal record at the hardest race of the year.

Schaaf wasn’t only the best runner on the team he also got many other awards presented to him at the banquet. He was chosen by his team most successful runner, team captain, MVP, spark plug, hardest working senior, boy, and highest GPA. Schaaf was also appointed OHS candidate for the scholar athletes award and was also awarded the district scholar.

Schaaf wasn’t the only good thing about the team. The freshmen boys had a remarkable year. “If the freshmen work hard they can make it to state in the future” said Schaaf. The running aspect isn’t the only thing that keeps the team, alive its also the fun. “The fun of cross country is sharing a passion for running with someone you care about. The real value is learning to work hard and experience the most intense camaraderie by sharing hope, victory, and failures with the teammates” said Schaaf.

Cross country is a sport you have to enjoy to do. Runners always have to run with someone who’s faster than them. Cross country not only takes dedication it also take a willingness to accept pain. Robert Schaaf has every quality of being a good runner and showed it by excelling this year.

Girls Golf Team: All Juniors

Junior Staff- Neely Good

Coach Chip Brock was surprised when last August rolled around; surprised at the fact that the six girls there to try out were all Juniors. With them all being returning players, Brock knew what he was in for: a season full of amusing entertainment.

“Having a team with all of us being juniors made it a lot of fun,” said Sarah Campbell. “We were always entertaining ourselves in our little van when we had to go to out of town matches.”

“What is said in the van, stays in the van,” said Coach Brock. He took an oath at the beginning of the season to let everything that was said in the van, stay in the van. “There were some interesting rides to and from places, but at least the girls were having fun,” said Brock.

“I would much rather have them having a good time than arguing.”

“The van rides were by far my favorite part of the season,” said Kelsie Minear. The van rides seemed to be a favorite of everyone’s season. “Another good thing about such a small team was that everyone was guaranteed a varsity position at one point in time during the season,” said Minear.

The girls went on to do well at all of their matches. Sad to see the season end, the girls knew they had one last season together next year.

Seniors remember being on sports teams as they prepare for college

One major part of high school is having the experience of being on a sports team. That close relationship with fellow team members brings memories that last a lifetime. But recollections of sports teams doesn't have to stop once you reach graduation. For a few seniors, the days of football will continue in college. “I'm looking forward to the new opportunity to compete,” said senior Brendan Donaldson.

Aside from the excitement and anticipation for the upcoming college games, seniors remember the good times of high school football and the friendships made along the way.

“The team is pretty close knit. We're like a family,” said senior Kyle Knadler.

College sports presents the opportunity for new memories to be made, and for a new family to be formed.

Although a new school brings new teammates, nothing can replace the relationships made in high school.
When the 2006-2007 cheerleading season came around, to the coaches and cheerleaders, it meant one thing: Coach Hamilton Henderson’s last year.

Many of the senior cheerleaders had been coached by Henderson since they were freshmen. Over the four years together, an inevitable bond was formed between the cheerleaders and Coach Henderson.

“I will miss that relationship that I had with the girls,” said Henderson. “I became very protective of them. They were my girls. Nobody got to mess with them. Some people look at coaching as a job for the money, but for me it was about mentoring, growing, maturing, and watching the girls improve,” said Henderson.

Many of the graduating seniors felt the same way about Henderson’s resignation, including captain of two years, Lauren Schneider. “Ham has been with us since we were freshmen, so him leaving has been a big change in the way we practice and has given our cheer season a whole different feel,” said Schneider.

“I was really upset because he has been with us for so long, but I knew that our new coach would do a great job too,” said senior Chelsey Walters.

Melissa Richie, the varsity coach for the upcoming school year will have big shoes to fill. Henderson as well as Central’s students and faculty have set high standards for tryouts as well as performances.
1. Nicole Lui performs at Liberty at a home girls basketball game to get the crowd excited. Lui was one of the few flyers for the 2006-2007 cheerleading season.

2. Chelsey Walters performs an acrobatic at the first round of districts for boys basketball. The cheerleaders cheered the boys onto the district championship game.

3. Senior cheerleaders pump up the senior section during the homecoming pep assembly to prepare them for the1st half of the basketball game. The last pep assembly was filled with excitement for the night to come.

4. "We Are Central" rattle through the gym to get the crowd into the game. School spirit was apparent this year in the student section due to the cheerleaders.

5. The cheerleading squad performs their dance and cheer routine at the last pep assembly of the year. The pep assemblies were responsible for getting the students prepared to scream their hearts out for their basketball players.
If any team deserves a reward for PRIDE, it's definitely this year's team. Although this year brought its ups and downs, there was no stopping this team from finishing strong. The coaches and rest of the team all participated in team building activities once a week.

One of them consisted of the team stacking up into two lines, stretching from home plate to the fence in the outfield. The two teams had to toss the egg from one person to another without dropping the egg. If anyone dropped the egg, the team had to start over. The first team to get the egg from home plate to the fence without dropping it, won.

These activities were a way for the team to not only have fun but grow as a team.

"I enjoyed the team building activities because it gave a different twist to practice and made our team stronger. It always made practice more exciting."

GOING TO COLUMBIA
By: Stephanie Dobyan

Imagine the excitement when you find out that your sports team gets to go to a competition overnight, however; the only thing you care about is the room service, bathrobes and the swimming pool.

This year the team had the opportunity to travel to Columbia, Missouri to play in a tournament made up of several teams from the surrounding area. “I thought it was more competitive tennis, because we got to play teams that aren’t in our conference,” said Sophomore Haley Mann.

This was a particularly enjoyable adventure because it was an overnighter and the team members got to stay at a local hotel. “It was a fun experience and it made our team become a lot closer,” said Sophomore McKenzie Riddle. This stay helped to give the team the opportunity to get to know each other better and have fun on and off the tennis court. “I made some new companionships and bonds that will last a lifetime,” as Sophomore Kaitlin Roberts put it.

Overall this was a new experience for the girls tennis team and Senior Nisha Sheth explained that, “Going to Columbia was a great experience for our team to play competitive teams outside our district. It was so much fun and helped our team get closer.”

PUMP UP THE JAM!

Seniors Lead the Way for a Bigger, Better Squad

Each basketball and football game, the crowd anxiously awaits for half-time when the Pom Pon squad performs. Nervous for their performance, the squad hides it well behind their big smiles.

This year the Pom Pon squad was composed of sixteen girls; half of which were seniors. “I enjoyed being a senior on the squad,” Hannah Strasser said, “I know how much I looked up to those girls when I started out and it was really cool being a role model for the younger girls.”

With new faces and more girls dancing than last year the Pom Pon squad learned to cooperate with one another.

“We all got along really well,” explained Strasser, “Most of the girls are like my best friends.”

Senior Kari Moran would also agree. “I enjoyed how all the girls, new and old, welcomed me to the squad even though I came from Benton.”

Time and dedication paid off well for the girls at Pom Camp. This past summer they placed second. The squad also received the all-around spirit award voted on by squads from other schools.
SIZE isn't EVERYTHING

Central boy’s basketball keeps up despite their loss in size.

Despite the doubts of their peers, this winter Central basketball players excelled without the height they've found essential in the past. With a record of 15-12, the basketball team pulled together and came out with a winning season. The five leading seniors made up for their lack in size with their hard work and dedication. “What we lost in height we gained in quickness” said senior Colby Smith. Also, two key sophomores, Justin Love and Clay Linebach, undeniably did their part in the team’s success.

Towards the end of the season, Central entered the district tournament seeded forth and upset the number one seed, Oak Park, in the second round. “This was a big win for us because they beat us by fifteen at home”, said senior Casey Siela. For the third consecutive year, the team made their way to the district championship and came out with second place.

Girls Varsity Basketball had four underclassmen on the team this past year. The underclassmen brought a lot to the team.

"No matter what we can sub anyone in at any point in time because we have a deep bench," said Senior Nikki Pourladian.

Underclassmen Amy Majors, Bailey Griffin, Claire Humphreys, and Alexis Bates bring not only skill, but motivation, laughs, and enjoyment to the team.

"The underclassmen give us a good balance and they learn what is expected from the upperclassmen," said Coach Kelly.

Even though there is quite a few underclassmen it does not affect the strength of the team.

"We don’t have a single player that is a high scorer, we are all high scorers. We can count on any player to put up some points for the team," said Pourladian.

The underclassmen see it as an advantage to be playing up to the varsity level.

"It is an advantage because it prepares us for our future years and gives us more experience," said Sophomore Amy Majors.

The underclassmen complete the girls varsity basketball team, adding depth and motivation on the court.

After several tough preseason practices and getting the new freshman team members acquainted, the Central wrestling team set out to reach for new horizons.

It was soon obvious that their hard work and determination would pay off. "Everyone was just really excited about it," said junior James Stegall. And after a successful regular season with a seven win to two loss record in the conference and over half of the team with individual winning records, two of Central's wrestlers proceeded to the state competition. "It's a good sign when you're seven and two," said Coach Swope. And it was. Junior Ben Pister and freshman Bobby Nachtrab both qualified for the state competition. Pister brought the fifth place award back to Central.

Sophomore Bryce Fraizer, junior Jimmy Davis, junior Jimmy Jordan, and senior Michael Dixon all narrowly missed qualifying for the state competition by one victory.

We really support each other at meets and even while racing,” said Ashley Gay.

Both Ashley and Natalie agreed that it made it so much more fun being on swim team together but Always having fun they are still sisters and still have their moments of arguing and such. “We get along... most of the time,” said Ashley Gay.

Ashley and Natalie also love just being on swim team and everything about it. “My favorite thing would have to be getting sonic after every morning practice,” said Natalie Gay. Almost all the girls always go for a little sonic after a long morning practice to get something to eat or drink.

“We always push each other to be better and are competing quite a bit,” said Natalie Gay. In every situation sister-ship brings out the best in you.

How dare you think and imagine? Open your textbooks and read? Step outside of the box and excel? It is not acceptable, agent, to want to succeed. This world of standardized tests and GPA's has no room for your creativity and fun projects, agent, so stick to the norm. The Talented and Gifted Program (TAG) has been a prestigious part of Central High School for over 30 years. This year the TAG Science Investigations class saw a few new faces. In addition to three first year students, a new teacher jumped on board. The twelve Science Investigations students gladly welcomed Mrs. Funk to their team.

Mrs. Funk wasn't sure what to expect, except for an interesting, new experience. "I just expected the students to work at a high level of rigor independently," said Funk.

This year, Mrs. Funk joined forces with Mr. Meyers, a veteran TAG teacher, and led students to science fair victories. The students participated in the MARSEF Science Fair at Missouri Western. Later in the year the class took the traditional road trip to St. Louis, Missouri to compete at the Junior Science, Engineering, and Humanities Symposium to defend the two National JSEHS titles earned by two of last year's class members.

"But you can't really call it a class," said junior and second year TAG student Linsee Addington, "It's more like a family. We spend a lot of time together outside of school." Students and teachers alike are looking forward to more successes next year.
Babies. They are cute to look at but when it comes to the constant crying and change of diapers they're not so cute anymore. Raising a baby is a huge responsibility especially as a teenager. The Child Development class taught by Mrs. Geib focused on teaching students the responsibilities of raising a baby and hopefully preventing teenage pregnancy.

Sophomore Andrea Kneib believed this class was very beneficial to girls her age.

"The class is realistic, said Kneib. "It will help me now and in the future because I've realized how much work a baby really is to care for."

Along with raising a baby comes sacrifices.

"I had to take the baby with me everywhere but work. Sometimes it was embarrassing to carry around but when I went out with my friends, they all wanted to hold it. There wasn't much I had to do then," said Kneib.

Sophomore Makysa Cook thinks every girl should take this class.

"Some people think it's not a big deal to have a baby but it really is. The doll was a pain, I can't imagine what a real one would be like," says Cook.

The Child Development class taught students the responsibilities that come along with raising a baby aimed to prevent teen pregnancy.
Teachers balance school and home life

Senior Staff: Casey Kulas

ToCAST, DDPAL, and active reading, all of these things had one thing in common: English Teachers.

Have you ever wondered what these teachers did after 3:30 p.m.? Well, some coached, some wrote novels, and some just became moms.

After 3:30, Marnie Lucas, a 10th grade English teacher, became a swim coach. Lucas coached two seasons of swimming during the school year. These two seasons included one season of boys swimming and one season of girls swimming and diving. Then, during the summer, Lucas coached another season of swimming. Lucas’s life consisted of being at school or at a swimming pool. She also had time for her husband, son, and daughter.

“I feel like I’m an oxymoron— a jock and an English teacher,” said Lucas.

After 3:30, Vicky Bryan, an 11th grade English teacher and a creative writing teacher, became a writer and an artist. Bryan did a lot of things after 3:30 such as taught a night class at Baker University in the graduates program. She also created altered art pieces and stained glass. Her biggest after school project was writing her novel. She has been writing the novel for a couple of years in her spare time.

“Otherwise, I’m just a big tweedey nerd,” said Bryan.

After 3:30, Dawn Smith, an 11th grade English teacher, became a great mom. Smith went to watch her children practice sports. She went to soccer games and football games. She would make them dinner, and they would all bake cookies together. She would play out in the yard with them. Smith loved her “double life.”

“I have no other life, I live for this stuff,” said Smith.

So, if you have ever wondered what the average English teacher does after 3:30, now you know.

Who's Who Amongst Students at American Universities & Colleges
Who are all these creepy crawly pint size people that have invaded our building in the past five years? With the number of new babies soaring past twenty it is quite evident that a "Baby Boom" has occurred right here in our school. For many teachers the fact that so many of their colleagues have young children is a comforting thing. "I love knowing that there are so many other parents that I see on a daily basis that are experiencing the same things with their kids that I am experiencing with my kids." Said math teacher Becky Callaway.

Because the staff here at Central is rather young a baby boom was inevitable. With so many teachers getting married and starting families it is safe to say that the baby boom is far from over.

Geometry

This is where things got tricky. Should you take geometry freshman year or sophomore year? Be cool and daring or brave the older students, or sit back and grasp a firm knowledge of those $x$ and $y$ intercepts. Either way, it's time to break out the theorems and proof your way through geometry.

Algebra 1

One of the options for freshman year math class. Safe and secure, on the first day of high school you knew you would be seated with all your other freshman buddies. Now get out your pencil and do those line equations.

Algebra II

Aaah. Stage two of algebraic equations. Let's see how much fun we can have with some solving and quadratic formulas.

Trigonometry

Time for semester math classes! Vertical translate and SOH CAH TOA those triangles until your little heart is satisfied, because it's trig time, and that means party time.

Calculus

Even the name is scary. It's unlike algebra and trigonometry, residing in a realm all its own. Delving into limits and derivatives, even the definitions of the math functions don't make sense. Never fear though, calculus is here, and no matter what the problem is, chances are calculus can solve it. Whether you like it or not.

College Algebra

You'd think that there were enough algebra classes with the previous two, but obviously you were mistaken. Everything will be okay though, because it's time to break out the synthetic division and hyperbolas! (Not to be confused with HYPERBOLES...No matter how close the words are, they are not the same thing.)

Art represents different ideas to different people. Some feel it a concept, others concentrate on the technique, and some view it as a mode of personal expression. For the Advanced Placement Studio Art Class, all of these came into play.

"I like the ideas that go in behind it," said junior Hannah Hurd when asked what she liked about her art.

Art frequently appeals to the visual sense. "I like the bright colors and the over exaggeration of it," said senior Alana Scroggins when asked what she liked about her artwork.

Art allows the use of different media to make a statement. Sophomore Taylor Bronson used metal as one medium and explains how it had "a lasting quality."

Something as simple as a mechanical pencil can create an excellent piece of art. "I like using grays and a lack of color," said sophomore Matt Robertson. Artistic presentations can be used to elicit emotions. "I like to come up with crazy ideas that make people laugh," explained junior Alex Hartman.

Art provides a means of expression and can use many different formats, mediums, and ideas.
Sophomore Kelsy Jones gets in a good stretch before class. Jones really enjoyed her experience in her 9th hour dance & members class this year.

1. Senior Mark Wachter concentrates on his assignment during class. Wachter took the class the first year it was available.
2. Sophomore Breann Bobot stretches out. She made sure to stretch well before exercising.
3. Junior Alex Hartman and senior Joe Harper get around in class. The pair loved to keep the class entertaining for all.
4. Junior Maurice Bennett works diligently on the new laptops. The new laptops gave students more opportunities for computer classes.
5. Girls in the 9th hour dance & members class work out at Dance Arts. The girls learned many different types of dances while they were there.
Many students expanded their horizons by taking new classes that were added to the curriculum this year. Sophomore Kelsey Jones tried out the new P.E. class, dance and aerobics. "I really enjoyed the atmosphere, because we had so many fun people in our class. I also liked learning the many different dances. They might be kind of silly, but they are fun to do," said Jones.

Other people in the class got a more relaxing feeling from what they were taught. "We learned a lot of different forms or aerobics, like yoga and pilates, and how they help to relieve stress," said senior Abbey Sale.

Also added, was a graphic design class. Students were able to expand their creative art by using computers. "Using the computer for art is new, mostly untouched territory for high school kids. It's fun and is a new outlet for art," said junior Hannah Hurd.

Some saw the new class as a way to get some experience for future careers. It can be used to fall back on one day. "If I want to go into a design field as a job, I can revert back to what I learned now and apply it to my job," said junior Katie West.

The classes have given students a great way to learn something new. So don't be afraid, break out from the norm once in awhile!
We asked a few history teachers why they chose to teach history and this is what they said... can you pick who said what?
1. “The essence of history is to understand how we got where we are in order to progress into the future.”

2. “I like working with people; I knew I wanted to be a teacher; the only thing I’m good at is history. It all works out.”

3. “I love history and I wanted to make history fun.”

4. “I went to Mizzou to study journalism, and then I switched my major to business and then I realized that I hated math. I came to Central as the ISS teacher and after three years the Principal talked to me and told me that I needed to be in a classroom teaching so I went back to school to get the degree I needed and that is how I ended up here.”
How dare you want to become involved? Turn off the TV and join a club? Break out of your mold and try something new? It is not acceptable, agent, to want to be a part of something. This world of isolation and conformity is not made for your extra-curricular activities, agent, so ignore the urge to be active. Keep your interests and individuality, your variety and values, your participation somewhere else. Those are not for here. It would never work to be involved and enjoy free-time. Okay agent, you want to try it? Show me you can, manage school, life, and clubs. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to find your uniqueness and personalize high school. Enjoy yourself and your choice of ORGANIZATIONS. Your choice agent, accept the challenge or forget the chance to be a part of something more.

CLUB
You walked into the school at 6:23 pm. Instead of the silence you expected, you were greeted with the sounds of someone screaming followed by a “BANG!” At first you panicked, until you realized it was just the Chem/Physics Club having its monthly meeting.

Chem/physics Club had definitely set itself apart from all other clubs at Central High School. “I don’t think any other clubs blow stuff up” said club president Dimitar Stoyanov. Blowing things up wasn’t a single meeting event, but rather the basis of the meetings. “At one meeting we put aerosol cans into a bonfire. It was definitely the best memory from the year,” said Stoyanov.

It wasn’t only the kids that enjoyed themselves but the sponsor too; “I like ridiculing a bad science -fiction movie (especially disaster movies). We don’t have to make any preparations. We just watch a movie, point out the bad science, bad drama, bad acting, unbelievable stuff, and I get to be a smart-aleck and a cynic,” said sponsor Roger Price.

But where did this club come from? “The Chem/Physics Club was started by Dr. McLaughlin (the other chemistry teacher) and I in 1982 as a way of interacting with the students on a more casual and more fun level” said Price. “We hoped it would promote interest in science and make being a science student the ‘cool thing’”

This club continually acted as a way to get students excited about science with events ranging from watching movies, to fires, to sledding in the snow. The club was not only educational, but entertaining at every moment.
Last year, Mary Jo Hornaday stepped down from her position as the Journalism teacher and handed the torch to freshman English teacher, Marilyn Lance. Having teacher and students new to writing the paper, they had to learn together.

Even though Hornaday retired from her job, that didn’t stop her from stopping in with goodies and to help with the paper.

“I would’ve never survived without Mrs. Hornaday’s assistance,” said Lance.

There were many changes made to the paper this year, such as the colorful flag, mystery picture, and student-teacher perspective column. The decisions were made as a team and with the help of Lance.

“I like the pace of this class. It’s a nice contrast to teaching freshman language arts” said Lance. “I love bonding with the staff. It’s so fast pace you have to get comfortable with the people you work with.”
CHS Student Government

Have you ever wondered who painted all of the posters around the school? Have you ever wondered who came up with the decision to do “Stop The Bop” during cancomng? Have you ever wondered who organized all of the Homecoming days and festivus? Well have you?

Well, if you have, here’s your answer- Student Government.

That’s right, the people you elect each year to represent your class helped out with all of those things.

This past year, the student government of Central High School did a great job in promoting school spirit, helping with homecoming, and other things done this year.

“I think that this year’s student government did a great job in keeping everybody informed about certain class activities and raising school spirit more so than in years before,” said senior Kayley Gibson.

This year, the student officers went to the student government convention to learn how to raise more school spirit and to learn new things that could be done around the school and other fundraisers.

One thing government did new this year was host the First Annual Powder Puff football game. It was great. Tons of teams signed up and there was a great turn out in fans just wanting to watch.

Also, government added something new to cancomng. They sta “Stop The Bop,” by playing Hanson’s “Mmm Bop” over the loud speaker during passing periods. This helped the school to raise even more money because no one wanted to hear it everyday.

“I feel that they have been very productive and they all worked very well together in getting things done that needed to be done and ‘Stop The Bop’ was a great idea,” said Mrs. Larson, the student government representative.

Student government also made it very clear that they wanted to do great things for our school. Video announcements became a great thing to watch every Friday during seminar.

“I feel that this years’ video announcements are much better than the ones in years past because they were much better executed than before. The editing gave them better quality to the viewing. Also, they gave answers to common problems that effected every person at Central,” senior Alana Scroggins said.

Being in the student government at Central was a very big position, but the students this year did an amazing job.

URINETOWN, DRAMA TOWN

Here in Urinetown you have to pay a fee to pee. That's right, it's considered illegal unless you pay your fee. Urinetown isn't the actual town just a place that is continually referred to in order to show the people how good they have it.

Only two people, Dansare Lawrence and Brandt Shields, made it into this all state musical. "I've definitely met a lot of new people, all of the people are really friendly and we get along really well because we are all there for the same reason," said Shields.

These are some of the most talented and dedicated teens in Missouri. They are all working together to create a great show for a crowd of 3000 theater students. "We spend an entire weekend every month for an average of 12 hours a day practicing. It's really hard to lose a whole weekend but I love performing," said Dansare.

Most of their practices are in North Kansas City and they are housed by different families each time. "I'm super excited because this is the biggest show I've probably ever been in and I've definitely the biggest crowd I've ever performed in front of," said Dansare.

They will have their big show with the 3000 theater students in Saint Louis at the Touhill Theater for the International Thespian Society Conference. "I'm so excited, but also very nervous because theater kids are the worst critic, they will be judging my every move," said Shields.

It's such an honor to have some of our own Central kids in such a big show, some schools didn't even have one kid make it. Our first year to have anyone from Central in the all state musical they make Central proud.

A Covert Operation

JROTC isn't just marching around in uniform. JROTC isn't just putting up and taking down the flag. And JROTC isn't throwing rifles around. Central's JROTC program helps to make students aware of their rights, responsibilities, and privileges as Americans, and teaches students to be better citizens.

As student cadets progress through the JROTC program, they are able to join teams and crews, attain leadership roles, and participate in many activities. JROTC is a program that shouldn't be overlooked.

Why?

Why do you enjoy the ROTC program?

"Because it's overall really fun, and it teaches me how to be a better person." -Ryan Komer, Sophomore

"I feel like I'm a part of a big family, like I'm really accepted. I know I'm a part of something big." -Rachel Scott, Junior
Military Ball

Though JROTC encompasses lots of dedication, responsibility, and hard work, students do get one night free of responsibilities, the Military Ball.

The Military Ball is the biggest social event on the JROTC calendar. Cadets from all three St. Joseph School District high school’s were invited to the ball.

Traditions

What influenced you to become a member of the JROTC program?

"My dad was a member of JROTC back when he went to Central and he was a top shooter, so I decided to try it and I found out that I have same ability. I’m a top shooter too." - Madison Hayes, Sophomore

"It’s just a huge family tradition. My grandfather joined the military when he was young and now it’s just a tradition. In the beginning it was an obligation, but now I love it.” - Ryan Konner, Sophomore.

1 president, 1 vice-president, 1 secretary, 1 reporter, and 12 district vice-presidents. These are the 16 officers that make up the district level of DECA. This year Central was fortunate to take one of the 16 titles.

Steve Wichern was the 2nd place runner-up for one of the 12 district vice-president spots. "I actually ran for State President but didn't quite make it. I decided to run for district vice-president and was the 2nd place runner-up" said Steve Wichern.

Steve didn't have an easy trip running for these state level spots. The process Steve went through to become district VP involved studying for a test and passing with a 70%, to networking with other schools, going to fall leadership and meeting over 800 people, interviewing, and giving speeches in front of 500 people.

"During the interview they asked me questions like, what two books would you bring on a deserted island and why. These aren't questions I expected because they aren't related to leadership at all," said Wichern.

Steve loves being a district vice-president and thought that in the next few years Central was going to have more state level competitors.

"The other schools better be ready because Central will be a competitor and I am ready to teach others how to compete. Central is going to have to work hard and try," said Wichern.

DECA has improved every year Central has had it and has reached it's peak. In Steve's words, "DECA'S the way to go, so join DECA."

"Steve is not only instrumental in district VP but also at Central has taken leadership to the next level."

"DECA'S the way to go, so join DECA."

Taking It to the Streets of Florida

This year was a once in a lifetime opportunity for members of the high school band. This year about 85 of the 140 members in marching band traveled to Florida to perform in parades over Christmas break.

"If I don't go now, I won't get another chance to go with the band since this trip only comes around once every four years. The next time this trip comes around again, I will already be out of high school," said junior Dani Barton.

While in Orlando, Florida the band will be performing in three different parades.

"They will march in the Macy's parade at Universal Studios, the Orlando Holiday Citrus parade, and at Walt Disney World," said band director Ray Maxwell.

To be ready for the trip the students attending spend all of their class time practicing for performance perfection. Memorizing new music and spending what seems like an endless amount of time in the street marching were just part of the preparations needed to get ready for the trip. Along with music and step, style and money was also needed.

"All the students going on the trip raise their own funds, learn additional band and spend a lot of time practicing. It's about supporting," said Mary
Leading Ladies

Who stands out in Central’s Blue and White Regiment band? Most people would say that the drumline is the group that stands out the most. The 21 member line is just a small group compared to the almost 140 people in the entire band. But take a closer look and you will notice that on the drumline, there are only four girls.

Although there is a difference in the boy to girl ratio, being one of a few doesn’t bother the girls.

Junior Anna Flugrad, who plays bass drum, agreed that being one of a few girls didn’t make much of a difference.

“It was pretty weird at first, but the guys made me and Nicole feel comfortable,” said Flugrad.

Competition between the boys and girls on drumline doesn’t seem to be a problem either.

“When we first started drumline, we got teased, but it didn’t bother me. Anna and I just stuck together,” junior Nicole Love, bass drum said.

No matter how many girls compared to boys there are on the line, they would all agree that the entire group is one big family.

“Everyone has a friendly relationship with others. You have to respect each other so everyone can come together with a common goal,” said drumline director Chad Lippincott.
A change was on the horizon this year for the girls choir Belcanto. Every year there is normally close to 75 girls in this choir; close quarters, catastrophe for claustrophobics. This year three class periods came about. The idea was brought about towards the end of the school year in 2006. This gave the directors a chance to pay more individual attention to students.

"The only problem we had at the fall concert was getting on the risers without ever having practiced together," said Mrs. Davidson.

Their sound quality had not seemed to diminish based on the three classes, but they practiced right before the concert so they were allowed to hear what they would sound like when put together.
"We used to put all the best musicians in the chamber choir and all of the best performers in the show choir," said Mrs. Davidson.

This year they went for something new. They wanted the opportunity of equal representation of both expression and sound quality of the performers.

In the past the directors told the show choir participants that if they didn't come to the practices they would be kicked out of the choir.

"I would like to keep the class like this as long as it is working," said Mrs. Davidson.

Viva la Diva is what they called themselves. The new girls show choir was who they were. This year Central created a new show choir, which gave an opportunity to many girls.

"I created the girl's group so that those girls who were right on the edge of the cut could have a way to perform in a show choir setting," said choir teacher Mrs. Davidson.

The hopes for next year are to continue to offer the girls show choir again, but it all depends on the participants.

Forum Club was a club that met to discuss current issues and do other activities involving politics. The club consisted of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Forum Club meets at least once a month at president Nisha Sheth's house.

"We have pizza paid for at all of the meetings, and it's just a good time," said senior, Sheth. As president, Sheth was responsible for planning meetings and making sure they ran smoothly. "I try to arrange meetings on dates that have less conflict so that more people can come. Forum Club has one of the biggest memberships at Central."

Meetings have included such things as Coach Henderson discussing Black History Month, to arguments between Democrats and Republicans over the November election. "During the arguments, Mrs. Northup was fearing, knowing that McCaskill was going to win. It gets real fun to see people debate about what they believe in," said Sheth.

Not only was there excitement during meetings, but also during trips Forum Club took. About once a month, the club made their way to Kansas City to catch a movie.

Every October, there is a meeting at Missouri Western called Convocation that the Forum Club attends. There is always a guest speaker who addresses critical issues.

Forum Club has been a great opportunity for students to learn about what is going on in the world around them.
German teacher broadcasts to other schools in St. Joseph to give them the opportunity to learn the language.

Name: Mrs. Gustafson
Class: German
Hour: 8th Hour
What: Broadcasts to Benton and Lafayette.
How: Camera, TV, and microphones.

SENIOR STAFF - Lindsey Stewart
Imagine having a class where there is no teacher present, well, in person. That’s exactly what Ms. Gustafson does with one of her 8th hour classes. With Central students present in the classroom, she broadcasted to Benton and Lafayette.

"Using the school district’s network, I dial into the other two schools. It’s like calling someone on the phone, except on television. We see each other on the television screen, and communicate via a microphone and a speaker in each room," said Ms. Gustafson.

Even though broadcasting allows all the public high schools to have the opportunity to learn German, teaching to other schools while still having Central students in class was a challenging task.

"I think the learning environment is pretty challenging for everyone involved—the students in my class at Central, those at remote locations, and even myself. Foreign language class is usually highly interactive, but our communication is limited due to the fact that we are not all in the same room together. I think the biggest thing missing is the personal relationship that develops between students and teachers. It’s hard getting to know someone when you only see them on a TV screen," said Ms. Gustafson.

Because students at Benton and Lafayette cannot be physically at Central for the class, they have to work harder to get homework in.

"We usually go over homework at the beginning of class—the proctors check for completion, but I have to rely on their oral contributions to determine whether or not they are correct. I have relied on them to get assignments back and forth and ensure that the technology is working correctly—they are a huge help!" said Mrs. Gustafson.

As far as the class goes, there are a few set backs.

"This is the only year I’ve done distance learning. It has been an interesting experience, but I don’t think that it is best suited for foreign language. If German is made available to Benton and Lafayette next year, I hope that students are able to ride the bus to Central," said Mrs. Gustafson.

BATHROOM EDITION
Central Brush and Pencil club paints murals in the bathrooms.

SENIOR STAFF: MacKenzie Glidewell

The students from Brush and Pencil club painted the bathrooms this past school year. The students are painting on the walls with the designs of Gaulta's logo, a mural, a mural and a beach and a mural.

Photos by Melissa Watson.
Brush and Pencil did something that has never been done. They painted murals on the bathroom stalls. The students got the idea from a Missouri Scholars Academy seminar.

"MSA was made responsible for more than just the literal idea. MSA made us feel like we could change the world, and not just that...that we needed to. Granted painted bathrooms aren't revolutionary, but its a start. It's nice to make a difference," said Erin Raffensburger.

Each artist came up with mural ideas then got them approved by Mrs. Williams. Some of the ideas were Gandhi, a castle, a seasonal design, a beach, and a fishbowl man.

"I think part of why they turned out so well is because each artist kind of played to their strengths," said Raffensburger.

Most of the student body didn't know about the club painting the bathrooms.

"We really hoped they would be surprised to walk into the bathrooms and see art instead of profanity," said Raffensburger.

Changing the world one bathroom stall at a time, Brush and Pencil Club made an impact on Central High School.
Central Gets Goosebumps For the Arrival of New Group

“Nobody knows what we are,” sighed Junior Hannah Hurd. The Rushmore Group began last year. “Hannah and I had a friend who tried to kill himself,” explained Junior Jon Roberts. “We were inspired to start a group for people like him.”

“He had a problem and felt he couldn’t talk to any adults,” said Hurd. He didn’t know which friends to talk to.”

“All petitioned in the counselor’s office for two months before Mrs. Danford responded,” said Roberts. “And we got Ms. Meyer involved.” Roberts was referring to counselor Chris Danford and Language Arts teacher Vickey Meyer, the sponsors of the Rushmore Group.

Meyer became sponsor of the group because she wanted to be a part of a change to the school society. “In light of events happening all over America, people hurting themselves, and all of the violence, I hope the Rushmore Group will provide support,” said Meyer.

The creation of the group was to be a peer-to-peer help program. “We provide an outlet for kids who have no one close to talk to,” explained Hurd.

“Honestly, I don’t do a lot,” revealed Meyer. “I just provide the meeting place. I let them run it; it’s supposed to be peer-to-peer.”

Once the group had approval, they sent out a request for members. Eight other students joined Hurd and Roberts. They went to a training session at MWSU to get an understanding of simple communication skills and leadership. It was there they adopted the mascot of the goose.

“The goose symbolizes leadership,” said Roberts. “Geese fly in a ‘V’ shape. When the leader gets tired, it gets support from the rest of the flock.”

“Like the geese, we’ll stay together and help people,” added Hurd. “And besides, we like the shirts.”

Jokes aside, Hurd, Roberts and Meyer all have big plans for the group.

“We want to see it flourish,” expressed Roberts. “I hope it continues when Hannah and I graduate. But most of all, hopefully a kid or two gets helped.”

“We make the world a better place,” laughed Hurd.
Central Debaters add Comical Attitude.

Team members change up the way debaters debate.

SENIOR STAFF: Madison Glidewell

Usually when one thinks of debate they think strict speeches, arguments, and tournaments. Now debate has a new look.

Students like James Stegall, Pat Davis and Tim Wang have turned debate around. The students added a comical look to the debate team. Tim Wang and James Stegall now lift weights and wear sombreco while in the middle of debates.

"I think I have provided the missing link necessary to making this team the best in the world" said, Junior James Stegall.

Often Central students wonder what debate tournaments are actually like.

What actually has gone on during debate tournaments?

"During a debate tournament there is lots of people and lots of speaking," said Junior, Pat Davis.

With the boy's added touch to debate they have thought that they have made debate more interesting than past years. While learning good public speaking and oratory skills the debate participants have learned skills that will help them in the future.

Because of the fresh way of changing things up these boys will be remembered for their way of doing things differently for debate.

Mr. Paden, the Debate sponsor undergo much stress during debate tournaments. Paden and the debate team are known through out Central for their success and humorous touch.
Central Debate students all helped out during the annual Holiday Debate Tournament. While some students competed others helped out at the scoring tables and in the hospitality room.

Little Known Class Makes Big Hit

SENIOR STAFF: Megan Bailey

Many people do not know much about the strings program at Central High.

"Anyone who is interested should join. It is a great opportunity and easy scholarship money," said senior Tori Carvell. Tori played second violin in Central's orchestra. She began playing when she was in sixth grade.

"My favorite part about being in the orchestra is learning fun music like Phantom of the Opera, Pink Panther and the Star Wars Theme!" said Carvell.

Freshman Tyler Talbott said his favorite thing about being in the orchestra was "playing orchestra music and talking to my older friends."

Talbott played the violin and has been playing it since he was in sixth grade.

"There is a great group of people in orchestra and a new challenge in music arises each class." said Junior Sara Douglas.

Douglas has played the violin since she was in fifth grade. She also takes private lessons once a week along with practicing her pieces for school three times a week.

"We go on great trips and do cool public outings like Christmas caroling," said Douglas.

Mrs. Stickney was always looking for new recruits to make the orchestra more popular every year.

Having a Little Fun While Doing a Little Good For The World

SENIOR STAFF: WILHELM WASSON

Tis the season for teachers to dress in 70's clothing and seniors wear crazy outfits. During the senior faculty games the crowd went wild when the senior boys beat the male teachers. "... it was fun to watch the seniors push around the teachers," said senior Misha Mazurkewycz.

But the real winners were United Way and Salvation Army. With the help of all the students together they raised around $11,000.00 without counting the cans.

"It's amazing how everyone is able to come together and raised that much," said senior Abby Sales.

It will be tough to beat the fundraising record next year but Central has the right stuff for the job!

How dare you be an individual? Wake up each morning and be willing to be yourself? To acknowledge the fact that it’s normal to be a little abnormal? It is not acceptable, agent, to stand out. This world of pre-set designs and uniformity is not made for you to be different. Keep your hopes and dreams, your philosophy and character, your way of life to yourself. Those are not for here. It would never work to be one in many. Okay agent, you want to try it? Then let me hear your voice. Tell me who you are. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to be noticed as you. Don’t let yourself hide in shadow. Step forward, show your PERSONALITIES. Your choice agent, accept the challenge or never have the chance to live.

Agent Patrick Baker

Agent Laura Hutton
Nicole Krueger

Female
Age: 15
Shoe Size: 9

Chose having her head half the normal size, due to the fact that it will blend in better than a head twice the normal size. When asked to choose between Santa's Workshop, kebler tree and a cobbler, she chose Santa's Workshop. She has decided that she would love to have super powers. Not to be confused with her twin brother.
Sebastian Sadler

Male
Age: 14
Shoe Size: 8

Z is Sebastian's least favorite letter because it's the last in such a long line. His favorite ocean is the Pacific Ocean, where he hopes to one day take his massive amount of dogs, seven of them to be exact, on vacation. He was last seen sitting on the sidewalk near his house after he was completely mortified from falling off of his scooter.
Krista Flint

Female
Age: 15
Shoe Size: 7

Her favorite shampoo is Garnier. Enjoys typing the word “typewriter” which is the largest word on the top part of the keyboard. Among typing typewriter she wants to be part of the band Nickelback. Her favorite Goddess is Athena, the goddess of war/wisdom. So also loves GIR from Invader Zim.
Stuart Harris

Male
Age: 15
Shoe Size: 9.5

Stuart was last seen running around trying to find his "superpowers" that he hopes to one day possess. If possible, he would choose to have his head be twice the size of a normal individual's. You might try finding him at a Star Trek convention, considering he's a huge fan of Spock.
Anne Cline

Female
Age: 15
Shoe Size: 8

Anne prefers using Suave shampoo to get that silky, glamorous shine before heading off to school. While shopping, she looks forward to cutting down her walking time by using the escalators. One day, Anne hopes to visit Santa at his workshop in the North Pole before she dies.
Brennen Bierschenk

Male
Age: 14
Shoe Size: 11

Brennen hopes to one day be like Dash from the "Incredibles" because of his amazing speed. He is particularly fond of the Atlantic Ocean, where he would like to vacation one day. He was last seen hanging around the bowling alley, one of his favorite past times.
Ceara Reynolds

Female
Age: 14
Shoe size: 9

Ceara likes to keep it simple. She'll use any shampoo you give her, as long as it smells incredible. One day, Ceara hopes to become an architect. She was last seen lying in a mud puddle at camp while trying to pick up her sister.
Christopher Hillyard

Age: 16
Sex: Male
Shoe Size: 11

Christopher loves the month of September for it's wonderful weather. He was last seen rocking out to his favorite band, Blink 182. You might be likely to see him wearing anything blue, drawing his inspiration from the Smurfs. Please contact us as soon as possible if you spot this individual lurking around anywhere.
Nick Saverino

Age: 15
Sex: Male
Shoe size: 9

Nick loves the amazing scent of Suave shampoo. He likes any body of water that does not contain stingrays. Enjoys eating the scrumptious dessert cake. He also chooses Star Wars over Star Trek. Commonly found watching Scooby Doo because he is fond of Shaggy.
Wolfgang Trujillo

Male
Age: 14
Shoe Size: 8.5

Out of all the letters in the alphabet, Wolfgang dislikes the letter "J," but still enjoys the month of January despite the "J" in the name. Wolfgang can be found playing the drums as often as possible as well as the piano when the mood strikes him.
Monica Miller

Female
Age: 15
Shoe Size: 11

All through the month of June she seems enjoyable because that is her favorite month. She enjoys munching on animal crackers. Along with everything she enjoys many polka dots.

Wanted for stealing toasters

Caleb was last seen flying with his awesome super hero wings over the skies of Michigan. He admits to loving bologna sandwiches, and has a soft spot for Winnie the Pooh "because he's cute, round, and yellow."

Personalities 187
Darren Jagodzinski
Wanted for wearing too tight jeans

Darren would love to have a girl next to him in his passenger seat to cruise down the Belt Highway late into the night.

BONUS: A movie at the dollar theater. His hero is Rob Schase because he can run really, really fast. Darren prefers to run in Asics shoes, because they’re very comfy.

Madison Young
Wanted for being the friendliest at Central

Born on February 2, 1991, Madi was last seen rocking out in her car to the first CD she ever purchased, the Spice Girls. Her favorite kitchen appliance is the refrigerator, and she loves that little fish Nemo from the movie "Finding Nemo."
Lindsey Pearson
Wanted for being way too tall

Lindsey was last seen trying to find clothes to fit her unusually long legs. She loves to watch the cartoon Tom and Jerry, and she frequently confuses the oven with a radio because they "look so similar." Please contact us as soon as possible if you have seen this wanted Spice Girls fanatic.

Chance Garrett
Wanted for being lethal on the wheel in ceramics

Chance prefers swiss to cheddar, due to the fact that "Cheddar is always better." As soon as he wakes up in the morning, he brushes his teeth and listens to Now 1, which was his first CD ever. Chance also enjoys periwinkle blue.

October, and school lunch.
Nico Martinez
Wanted for his crazy good rap skills

Nico was born on January 30, 1991. He really looks up to his idol Fat Albert, for being the best cartoon character of all time. Nico loves listening to his first CD, Afroman, while using the handy-dandy can opener in the kitchen.
Brent Thiel

Wanted for being way too cool

Brent’s favorite kitchen appliance turns out to be the blender, ladies! He wishes that Central would add nap time to the agenda. Brent is also bringing the large mouth bass back onto the scene due to it being his favorite fish.

Personalities 193
Sadie Dahle

Wanted for being a good person

Sadie was born on May 13th, making her a loyal Taurus. She wishes that the Backstreet Boys would make a second comeback so she could continue buying their CD’s. She loves to use the whisk while baking some fabulous food in the kitchen. She was last seen watching Tom & Jerry in front of her T.V. at home.

Sophomore's Most Wanted Moments:

Sophomore Clay Landis focuses on the basket. Landis played his first year in varsity this year.

The sophomore hall was covered in pirate posters during fall homecoming. The sophomore were best friends for fall.

Sophomore Claire Humphreys and Joanna Deffert great around during winter. The girls showed off their sophomore pride by wearing their class T-shirts.

Mr. Jordan and Mr. Northup celebrate their victory at competition. The Sophomore class has won the competition for several years.

Acacia Shifflett
Wanted for being ghetto fabulous

Acacia was last seen singing in her car to her first CD, Monster Jam. She loves to watch that crazy guy Stewie from the Rugrats cartoon while eating her breakfast before school. While in the kitchen, Acacia prefers using the blender opposed to any other appliance.
Dallas Becerra
Wanted for showing too much leg in his Speedo

Dallas spends his spare time perfecting his favorite dive, a reverse double with a full twist. He was voted "Best Hugger" by the girl's swim team. His life long dream is to swim the English Channel. When he grows up, he wants to be a forest ranger, so he too can prevent forest fires.

Agent Bryan

Agent Haggard
Elizabeth Sancho dreams of being a palm tree on the beach. At age 20, she can't live without Twix. Her favorite kitchen appliance just happens to be the dishwasher. According to custom belief, she hates doing dishes. When she was a little girl, she loved watching The Muppets. Of course, she would choose to be Miss Piggy. Why wouldn't she want to be a Muppet? She was a counselor who would rather be a mechanic. Why? Because she would never have to wear ties to work. Before the episode, she would want to parachute from a plane. Unfortunately, she is a married woman, and her new husband is a pilot. She would choose to be a dog that way she could fly around all day. She would also speak Spanish. So not as a dog, but she would be bilingual as a human. Her idol would be Mrs. Schank, which is great, because everyone can agree Mrs. Schank is pretty neat. Last but not least, her favorite MEM color is yellow. When she sets them, she probably imagines sunshine while she dreams of being a palm tree on the beach.
Language Arts 9
Brandon Scott Hackney, age 22, is WANTED for being illegally awesome. He was found wearing his foot pressure while watching his favorite childhood TV show, "Doug." He also enjoys eating his M&M's. His occupation is the 9th grade Language Arts teacher, but he could be found trying to pursue his dream of being a rock star. He enjoys brown M&M's and would choose to be a dog if he could morph into an animal. This means check any suspicious dogs in your area who eat brown M&M's. He did just happen to be his whole family so the family members will be the first to be questioned. Hackney has no children because he is too busy to jump on that train. Train? Could he be on a train? He did say that he would love to travel to Scotland before he dies, so he could possibly be found on a route to Scotland. Anywhere there is music you could possibly find him there too. Hackney enjoys singing and dancing to "It goes well with his rock star act. If you see the number 2042, you won’t find him. That number happens to be his student favorite number for no reason at all. He probably wouldn’t even like it if it were written into Spaghetti words. The best possible place he could be is somewhere that has pretty leaves in the Fall. So if you see Doug Fannie eating brown M&M's near pretty trees, then that’s Mr. Hackney WANTED for being illegally awesome.
How dare you solidify your memories? Be able to look back and read what an impact you’ve had on people? To grow up from an adolescent to an adult and be proud? It is not acceptable, agent, to be remembered. This world of mediocrity and forgetfulness is not for the impressions you’ve made on people. Keep your pride and pictures, the writings of your friends and families, your memoirs in another place. Those are not for here. It would never work to move on to college and remember your senior year. Okay agent, you want to try it? Then do it, allow your memory to be in print. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to enjoy your senior year, but look back on the impact you’ve made on other people’s lives with fondness. Accept the fact that you’re growing up, but be able to look back on friends in their own

Your choice agent, accept the challenge or risk the sorrow of forgetting.

This message will self destruct in 5...4...3...2...

Robert Schaaf

By Rudyard Kipling
If you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating;
And yet don't look too good, not talk too wise:
If you can dream - and not make dreams your master,
If you can think - and not make thoughts your aim;
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two imposters just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by shapes of malice for the wearisome load
Or watch the things you gave your life to broken
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools:
If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss;
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss:
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone;
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"
If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings nor lose the common touch;
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you
If all men count with you, but none too much:
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it
And - which is more - you'll be a Man, my son!

Misha

Misha, you have brought joy and happiness into our lives. You are a very intelligent and talented young lady, and we have always been proud of you in everything you do. The world is yours, enjoy it. We love you!

Ashton Puckett

Ashton,
Eighteen years ago you came into our lives - a little dark haired beautiful baby girl and we felt God richly blessed us. The years have passed so quickly and those blessings have compounded as we've watched you become a beautiful and amazing young woman. You have so many gifts and talents. Use them, find your bliss and run with it. Don't ever forget the road to home though or that you have a family that loves you very much.

With much love,
Dad, Mom, Bailey and Cydney

Loralyn Heath

One hundred years from now it will not matter what kind of house we lived in, how much money we had, nor what clothes we liked. But the world became a better place because you've graced it with your presence.
We wish your dreams come true and a life that gives you all you ever ask for.

Love,
Mom, Grams, Aunt Julie, Uncle Mark, Jesse, Uncle Andy, and Aunt Tammy.

We are proud of you, and all you have accomplished. You will succeed at anything you want. Stay true to your faith, and remember you are never alone.

We love you always,
Mom and Dad

Though the day is long and stressful,
And the night is full of fear,
We toil and struggle mightily,
Yet our goal is nowhere near.
When we sometimes lose our fortitude,
And question our resolve,
Remember God is with you,
And your life is full of hope.

Holly,
Time has moved quickly my senior. My baby girl who always woke from her nap yelling, “Mommy, I'm so happy!” Your smile is contagious. Your characteristics are as the rib of man: strong, yet delicate and fragile. The beauty of a woman must be seen from her eyes because that is the doorway to her heart. God has blessed you with many gifts and awesome beauty. If reflected in your soul. Those days spent with your grandmother were both rewarding to you and her. It is a privilege and blessing to have you for my daughter.

Mom & Dad

Andrea Jennings

I'm proud of my little girl. I knew she could do it. I look forward to this achievement and future successes to share with my daughter. You go girl! Mommy loves you so very much. I'm glad God blesses me with you.

John Vanderpool

John,
Congratulations! We are so proud of the wonderful young man you have become. We can not wait to see where your dreams will take you. May God bless and protect you.

Love,
Mom, Dad, & Adam

Catherine Tudor

You have been blessed with a legacy as you are the 6th generation of our family to tend this land. Take care of it well! In turn, it will bestow upon you its many treasures.

Tori Carvell

To our precious Squeaky—The moment we held you in our arms we knew we were loaned a treasure. As our daughter you are beyond what we could have ever asked or imagined. Your deepest beauty is your love for God and people. Continue to press on and enjoy the journey.

We love you!
Dad & Mom
